BEDLAM LOOSE

Heard and Breckinridge Fight.

The Colonel Strikes at His Opponent,

But the Blow Is Warded Off.

Other Congressmen Interfere at This Juncture,

And the Belligerents are Speedily Parted.

Both Combatants are Arrested by the Sergeant-at-Arms and Made to Apologize.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A scene of the wildest and most intense excitement occurred in the house at the conclusion of the debate on Mr. Hitt's Hawaiian resolution today, growing out of a personal difficulty between Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, and Mr. Heard, of Missouri, in which epithets like, "Impertinent puppy," "coward," "scoundrel," "liar," were bandied One blow was struck when friends interposed and the sergeant-at-arms arrested the two offenders and brought them to the bar of the house where Mr. Breckinridge in the course of an explanation practically challenged Mr. Heard and demanded personal satisfaction.

As well as the tangle of confused events can be unravelled, the encounter occurred in this way. Mr. Heard, who was in charge of the District of Columbia business, cut Mr Breckenridge, who was attempting to address the house on the Hawaiian resolution by demanding the previous question on the adoption of the resolution. Mr. Breckinridge immediately moved around from the side aisle in which he was standing to the tier of seats where Mr. Heard was located, and hot words followed. Mr. Breckinridge protested against what he called Mr. Heard's rudeness The latter declared he was only doing his duty. As the voices of the gentlemen rose members rushed thither.

"Impertinent puppy," shouted Mr. Breckinridge.

"Liar," hissed back Mr. Heard

At the word the white haired Breckinridge, who is a heavily built, stocky man, put his foot on the step on which the benches are located and let drive a right hand blow at Mr. Heard. Mr. Heard, who is a slight and apparently not strong, but rather tall man, with a brown beard, streaked with gray, dodged. In another instant a dozen hands were extended to restrain the Kentuckian and the tide of members swept him twenty feet up the main aisle. But he continued to struggle and wrestle with his captors, Messrs. Pence and Outhwaite.

The house and galleries were in an uproar. Bedlam had broken loose. Over it all the cracks of the speaker's gavel sounded as he attempted to quell the riot on the floor. In firm tones the speaker directed the sergeant-at-arms to arrest the offenders.

Colonel Ike Hill, the deputy, and his assistant, Mr. Robinson, grabbed the silver mace, the emblem of the house's authority, and rushed up the aisle. It was crowded with a seething mass of members When they had elbowed their way to the scene of the combat Breckinridge was still struggling with those who held him. His antagonist, Mr. Heard, was, too, calmly in his place. Misunderstanding Mr. Pence's attempt to quiet Mr. Breckinridge, who was trembling like an aspen with over wrought excitement, Colonel Hill and his assistant seized both Mr. Breckinridge and Mr. Pence.

"Not Pence," shouted a dozen members, "arrest Heard."

Mr. Heard was pushed into the arms of the deputy sergeant-at-arms. As the two men came together Mr Breckinridge made a desperate effort to free himself.

"You are a coward and a scoundrel," he yelled at Mr. Heard, but the stalwart Robinson roughly pulled Mr Breckinridge forward and the two representatives of the American congress were hustled, rather then escorted, to the bar of the house. The speaker ordered all to take their seats. Many of the members did so reluctantly.

"Take it back," shouted Mr. Breckinridge as he glared at Mr. Heard, who stood, like himself, in custody before the bar.

"You called me an impertinent puppy," answered Mr. Heard.

Meantime the speaker, in stentorian tones, was driving the excited and frantic members back with heavy blows of the gavel. Mr. Breckinridge was appealing for recognition, but the speaker would not hear him. After all the members were seated he ordered both Mr. Heard and Mr. Breckinridge back to their seats and then recognized the Kentuckian.

With his frame trembling with excitement, his silver hair tumbling back from his forehead, Mr Breckinridge rose, attempting to contain himself.

Mr. Breckinridge began his apology in humble tones

"No one," he began, "can regret more than I that any personal difficulty should occur on this floor, but when I thought I had been taken off the floor with great rudeness I went to Mr Heard and said to him that he could not do business in that way. He replied that that was an insolent statement, and that I was 'an impertinent scoundrel'"

"He said I was a scoundrel," interposed Mr. Heard.

"He called me a liar," went on Mr. Breckinridge, ignoring the interruption. "I ought not to have resented it, Mr. Speaker," he continued, turning to the chair, "but as a Mississippi judge once said, the lie was first assault, and in spite of my white hairs, I could not restrain myself. I apologize to the speaker and to the house. To the gentleman I will say," he added, as he turned and looked squarely at Heard, his voice rising to one of defiance. 'I will say that that can not remain between he and I." A scattering burst of applause greeted this. Mr. Breckinridge took his seat. The house gasped at this last statement and sat breathlessly awaiting for the reply.

Mr. Heard then explained the situation. Today, he said, had been set apart for District of Columbia business, and he had felt it his duty, when the opposing leaders on the Hawaiian resolution had finished their statements, to demand the previous question.

The gentleman from Kentucky had then hurried over to him and had stated, in a tone which he regarded as an insult, that the house would do no business today. He had, thereupon, demanded the yeas and nays, as he deemed it his duty to do, whereupon the gentleman from Kentucky, in language which he regarded as most offensive, had called him an insolent and impertinent something

"He followed," said Mr Heard, his temper rising, "that statement with a practical assault on me He called me a scoundrel."

"If I said' that I withdraw it," interrupted Mr. Breckinridge, with an earnestness that struck some of the members as ludicrous, and they laughed heartily.

"I do not think I said it," continued Mr Breckinridge.

"And I believe he did say it," said Mr. Heard.

"If after my disclaimor the gentleman still insists I said it," retorted Mr. Breckinridge again flaring up, "I withdraw it, he does not deserve it."

Mr. Heard hastily denied that he intended to question Mr. Breckinridge's veracity, but stated that he meant that in his excitement the gentleman from Kentucky had forgotten what he did say.

"I stated," he continued, "that the gentleman lied. Upon his withdrawing his offensive epithet I will withdraw mine but not before I believe that I have done nothing which it was not my duty and right to do"

Mr. Heard was also applauded when he took his seat.

This ended the wordy combat and in the absence of a motion which might have been made to reprimand the principals in the affair, the house proceeded with the question before it and the excitement soon subsided, although there was much speculation throughout the day as to what would be the outcome.

Mr. Berry, of Kentucky, a friend of both Breckinridge and Heard, was using his good offices after the row toward reconciliating them. Both are said to be possessed of physical courage, but the two men have been friends in the past and it is believed that the matter will be amicably adjusted and that no bloodshed will result.

FREE WHISKY CURE.

Rockford W. C. T. U. to Establish One.

ROCKFORD, Ill, Feb. 1.—For some time the local union of the W. C. T. U. has had under consideration the subject of the establishment of a free liquor cure in this city and at a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon it was unanimously voted to do so. The women are in receipt of a proposition from Dr. A. V. Hutchins, of Chicago, who for the past three years has successfully operated his cure for the reclamation of victims of the liquor habit in connection with the work of the W. C. T. U. of the west side in Chicago The local branch will be established in the temperance rooms, and he offers to treat men for $5 each, or nothing if they have spent their all. Dr. E. L. Clark, of Rockford, will be in charge of the new branch.

Legislative Committee to Be In This City Tomorrow.

The Nicholson Temperance Bill Seems Doomed—Young Republicans Oppose It.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 1—A resolution has been introduced in the house to investigate the southern hospital for the insane at Evansville.

Representative Nicholson has introduced a congressional apportionment bill in which the Fort Wayne district remains as it is at present

The benevolent committees will visit the Fort Wayne institution tomorrow.

The committee to visit Fort Wayne will arrive in the city tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Bobilya and Kell will be in Fort Wayne tonight.

CONCERNING NEWSPAPER LIBEL.

Senator Shiveley's bill concerning libel in civil and criminal cases was reported favorably by the senate committee on judiciary. It requires the aggrieved party to serve notice of the suit three days before its filing The notice shall specify the alleged false and defamatory statement. If it appears on trial that the article was published in good faith, that its falsity was due to a mistake or misapprehension of the facts, and that a full and fair retraction was made, after the mistake was brought to the knowledge of the publisher, then the plaintiff shall receive only actual damages Actual damages shall be construed to include all damages that the plaintiff may have suffered in respect to his character, property, business, profession or occupation. The bill also contains the provision of the Grubbs libel law.

WILL NOT REDUCE RAILWAY FARE

The railroad committee of the house has not agreed to report favorably on the bill to reduce railroad fare to two cents a mile, and it will not not do so, its members say.

The committee has agreed to report favorably on Representative Van Arsdel's bill providing that county commissioners shall grant a right-of-way over any highway to an electric road, whenever two-thirds of the land owners along the highway shall petition for the road.

SMOTHERING TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION.

It seems certain that there will be two reports from the committee on temperance as to the Nicholson bill. The men who think the management of the republican party in this state rests on them are bringing all possible influences to bear for the indefinite postponement of the bill. Some of them are already going about the general assembly declaring that the author of the bill is a "Quaker and a crank."

The only opposition to the bill so far has come from the young men, who believe they are called on to fix a policy for the party.

No remonstrances against the passage of the bill have been received by the committee On the other hand, citizens in all parts of the state are sending in petitions for the passage of the bill. The author of the bill is receiving from fifteen to twenty-five letters a day from republicans throughout the state indorsing the bill.

The latest story started by men here in Indianapolis who are trying to bring about the death of the bill is that it is not the product of republicanism, but was written by representatives of the Good Citizens' League. They declare that this fact alone ought to kill the bill.

There are nine members of the committee, and it seems probable that five of them, including the democratic members, will sign a majority report in favor of the indefinate postponement of the bill. Three of the republican members are heartily in favor of the bill. These are Chairman Nicholson and Representatives Arsdel and Willis. It is said that at least two other republican members were for the bill, until the party leaders took them to task The impression is that if the bill comes before the house for consideration, it will be passed with the local option stricken out. The party managers seem to believe that the "steering committee" of the senate will be able to kill the bill if it gets into their hands.

LOCKED UP

Were the Books of the Whisky Trust,

And the Court's Representative Was Not Permitted to See Them—To Blow Open the Safe.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Developments in the Whisky trust case to lay were of a sensational nature. The books which Judge Grosscup had ordered examined at Peoria were found to be locked up. An attempt was made to have two of the complainants in the receivership proceedings removed on the ground that they were mere clerks, and grave charges of manipulation of stock were made against prominent officials of the trust. The unexpected developments at Peoria caused considerable consternation in the ranks of the Hartshorne stockholders' committee. Last night Nathan Bijour, of New York, left for Peoria, accompanied by two expert accountants and armed with an order from Judge Grosscup for an examination of the company's books. Early today word was received that access to the books was denied. Mr. Bijour wired that the books were behind the bolts and bars of the company's vaults and that the only man having the combination to the safe was out of town. His request for instructions was answered immediately by a telegram ordering him to secure the books at any cost and by any means and assuring him of support in any methods he might see fit to use The prospects of a possible safe blowing episode at Peoria did not dismay the stockholders committee in the least. Their attorneys stated that they did not care how the books were secured and were positive that Mr. Bijour would get his experts to work today despite the missing safe combinations.

One of the attorneys for the stockholders' committee admitted in an interview that it was proposed to reach the books at Peoria by violence if necessary.

"The court has ordered these books examined," he said, "and we will examine them if dynamite is strong enough to open the vault. This afternoon Mr. Bijour was wired at Peoria to use dynamite in getting at the books, and I have no doubt that he will do so, if he finds it necessary. We are not to be stopped by any trickery on the part of the opposition. Mr Bijour and his accountants arrived in Peoria at 7 o'clock today and went immediately to the offices of the whisky trust The offices were practically deserted. No one was there but Ben Greenhut, son of President Greenhut. He informed Mr. Bijour that head bookkeeper Magee was the only man that could give the combination and that Mr. Magee had left for Chicago at 11 o'clock last night. The wire correspondence followed and we are now awaiting developments at Peoria"

FOUR CREMATED.

Frightful Result of a Fire in a Hospital.

Brave Little Minnie Baumer Prefers Death by Fire Than to Leave Her Patient.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb 1.—The Deaconnesses home, located on Jennings avenue, is burning and it is reported that four persons have been burned to death. They are.

Albert Almyer.
Minnie Baumer.
An eight months-old baby.
Jacob Krause.

The fire started in the basement, presumably from the furnace and before it could be extinguished four of the fifteen patients in the house and hospital were dead and the building almost entirely destroyed. Brave work on the part of the firemen and police alone prevented a further loss. The fire started about 11 o'clock.

The Deaconnesses' hospital has been in existence but a short time in this city. It is a branch of a large hospital in Chicago and of no especial denomination

The building was a wooden structure three stories high. In an incredably short time there was but little left of the building but a few parts of the side walls. The flames had gained considerable headway before the persons located on the top floor discovered their perilous situation. It was then too late to descend by the stairs and those on that floor gave up their lives. Before the fire department had arrived and before the flames had reached the outside of the building Minnie Baumer, one of the nurses, appeared at the up stairs window and implored those below to assist her in getting out her patient, who was Wm Almyer, one of the men burned. All saw that it would be folly to attempt to enter the building, which was now burning fiercely.

"Jump to the porch and save yourself," they cried to her as she was but fifteen or sixteen feet above the broad veranda roof.

"I can't leave my patient," was the reply of the brave woman, as she turned to look back into the room evidently to quiet the fears of Almyer, who thought she was going to leave him. For a moment the brave woman stood looking down into the crowd below her and then duty triumphed over her desire to be saved. The smoke was pouring from the windows about her and her white, startled face appeared as a picture in a frame of darkest ebony. Then she turned into the room and was seen no more until her blackened form was carried tenderly from the building shortly after.

Aroused by the smoke, James Ehert, one of the patients, grouped his way to the side window on the second floor and waved his hand to those outside His signal was seen and two men secured ladders, spliced them together, and placed them to the window. Ehert started to climb down, but lost his hold and was caught by those below. Four men were taken from the burning building; one was caught in a blanket, and the the four corpses were taken from the building before they had been consumed by the fire.

Jacob Kruse was found at the foot of the stairs leading to the third floor. He had been suffering from a fractured skull and was suffocated. Wm. Almyer was suffering from a broken hip and he was also suffocated. Minnie Baumer, the nurse who had remained to guard him, was found terribly burned at the foot of the bed. In an adjoining room was found the body of a young child eight weeks old. It had been suffocated. The four bodies were placed in a dead wagon and taken to a morgue

DRUGGIST ACQUITTED.

The Case Against F. H. Fryer, for Selling Whisky

In Less Quantities Than a Quart Without a State License to Do So.

Some of the druggists of the city, who it is alleged violated the law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquor, have been having an inning in court this week and some of them have gone out of it with a fine of $20 and costs taxed up against them on the dockets of the peace justices before whom the cases were tried. The affidavits in each case were filed by men who started out for the avowed purpose of securing convictions and making the testimony. This they did by going to the drug stores and purchasing a half pint bottle of whisky and then going to the justice office and making affidavit that the liquor was sold to them in less quantities than a quart without a license to do so. In several of the cases which were tried the druggists were fined $20 and costs and they appealed the cases to the circuit court, and in others they were acquitted on account of the insufficiency of evidence produced.

The case against F. H. Fryer, who conducts a drug store at 83 Wells street, in Bloomingdale, was tried last night before Justice Hays, where it was taken by change of venue from Justice France. The affidavit was sworn to by Julius Hazen, who alleged in it that on the 28th day of January the druggist's agent, Mrs. Fryer, had sold whisky in less quanity than a quart when he, the druggist, had no legal right to do so.

The case was tried on the part of the state by Deputy Prosecutor Charles Ryan and defended by Attorneys Robert Driebelbiss and Elmer Leonard The prosecuting witness, Hazen, was placed on the stand and he testified to the purchase of the liquor, a half pint of whisky, from Mrs. Fryer on the date named in the affidavit. In his cross examination Mr. Leonard drew from the witness the fact that he had purposely purchased the liquor, as he had done at other drug stores, for the purpose of making a case against the druggist, and that he did so because he wanted the witness fee in the case, $1, although he qualified it by saying that he believed the druggist was violating the law and he ought to be fined for it.

Mr. Leonard in his rigid cross examination traced the history of Hazen, whom he characterized as a "spotter," from the time that he came to this country in 1880 from Germany up until the present time, showing the different places that he had worked and the length of time that he was out of employment. The man had been a common laborer, working at ditching and such other manual labor as he could find to do. He testified that since the 1st of January he had had only a few days' work and acknowledged that he had been working up these liquor law violations for the purpose of getting the witness fees.

In the testimony he repeatedly said during the cross examination that he had purchased the liquor at Fryer's Monday morning, the 28th of January, and when he left the stand the defendant's attorneys insisted that the case be dismissed because the proof was at varience with the affidavit, which stated that the sale of the liquor was made on the 26th, which would have been last Saturday. This variance Prosecutor Ryan argued was not material. Attorneys Driebelbiss and Leonard insisted that it was, because if the defendant was convicted of selling the liquor on the 26th, he could be tried again in another court for selling it on the 18th. The hour was late when this point in the case was reached, and by agreement further consideration of the contested law point and argument as to the testimony was continued until 10 o'clock this morning.

This morning the state's attorney cited the court to the law and Justice Hays held that there was not such a material difference in the dates as to warrant a dismissal. The attorneys then submitted the case upon the testimony and Justice Hays acquitted the defendant, because the prosecuting witness had said at the time he purchased the liquor that he wanted it for medical purposes.

The law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors requires that all persons who sell it in less quantities than a quart must take out a state license of $100 This many druggists have not done and in order to permit their sale of it by the pint or half pint they must, according to a late decision, be satisfied that the liquor is for medical purposes and use proper precaution and care in determining whether it is for legitimate purposes. Some are very careless in this matter and they conduct a sort of a saloon bar business without having the proper license to do so.

CHECK FOR $12,000,000.

Transfer of the Brooklyn Water Front Finally Completed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The transferring of the Brooklyn water front interests, representing a capital of over $30,000,000, was completed in the hall of records yesterday by the filing of the deeds It is the intention of the company to establish a terminal at some point along the water front as a center for a railroad, which is to run along [illegible] water. Representatives of all t[illegible] ed met in the United St[illegible] fice, and in less [illegible] ds of th[illegible] ed had been given a check for the deeds, which were then delivered. One check on the Corn Exchange bank was for over $12 000,000, one of the largest that has ever passed the clearing house It is asserted that now it will not be necessary for the storage house owners of the east to consult the west when they want to ship a quantity of grain to Europe. It is also said that this consolidation will raise the value of property in the vicinity and cheapen grain shipments.

MUST GO AHEAD.

The Income Tax to be Collected for 1894.

Captain Reese Receives Word From Washington to Proceed With the Enforcement of the Measure.

Fort Wayne capitalists must get ready for the income tax law. The government needs money and the enforcement of this measure has been ordered in every revenue district throughout the United States Capt Chas. Reese, the United States deputy revenue collector for this district, received word this morning to proceed at once with the work. He was sent a large lot of blanks for corporations firms and individuals, who must call upon him, according to the law, and receive the same for the purpose of making their returns. All blanks must be filled out and returned to him before the first Monday of next month and all taxes from this service must be paid on or before the first day of July next The tax is on all incomes over $4,000 from whatever source, dating from January 1, 1894, to January 1, 1895 It was thought by many that this bill would be declared unconstitutional, but late decisions have influenced the government to proceed with its collections What a blessed thing it is to be poor!

All persons having an income of $3,500, or more, a year are required to fill out a blank and file it with the collector, although no tax is to be paid on incomes of less than $4 000 a year. This provision is made so the collectors can closely watch all persons whose incomes are likely to reach the $4,000 mark. All corporations, regardless of income, must fill out this blank. The penalty for failure to file the blank at the proper time is fifty per cent of the assessed tax The penalty for delinquency is five per cent, and one per cent a month interest for a fraudulent statement the penalty is 100 per cent.

When persons refuse or fail to make a statement the collector or deputy is authorized to fill the blank according to such information as he may have An appeal may be taken from such action within thirty days. Statements held in these returns are to be held strictly confidential, and for the slightest violation of this confidence the penalty is $1,000, two years imprisonment and disfranchisement for life As usual in all government transactions there are several miles of "red tape" connected with the collection of this tax, and every regulation must be strictly followed or the offender will be liable to fines or penalties. The blanks contain a number of extracts from the law and explanations of the requirements

WARD M'ALLISTER IS DEAD.

The Well Known Society Man Passes Away—Judge Hoar Dead.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Ward McAllister, the well known society leader, died in this city last night at half past 9 o'clock.

Mr. McAllister was taken ill a week ago with the grip There were no alarming symptoms surrounding his illness until 7 o'clock yesterday morning. From 10:30 to 2 30 the patient rallied and was much better. At that time he began to sink slowly and died at 9 30 o'clock.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning from Grace church. Bishop Potter will officiate. It is not yet decided whether the interment will be at Greenwood cemetery or at Newport, R I.

Mr. McAllister was born in Savannah, Ga, sixty years ago. His father was a lawyer and served several terms as mayor of Savannah. His grandfather was a prominent business man in Savannah. The dead man came to this city when he was twenty years of age and remained here until the death of a maiden aunt who left him some money. He then returned to Savannah where he was admitted to the bar.

CONCORD, Mass, Feb 1—Judge E R. Hoar died suddenly at 7.30 o'clock last evening. Ebenezer Rockwook Hoar was born in Concord, Mass, Feb 21, 1816 He was a brother of United States Senator George F. Hoar. For twenty five years he was a member of the board of overseers of Harvard In March, 1869, he was appointed by General Grant attorney general of the United States, and discharged the duties of the office until June, 1870

OVER TWO THOUSAND.

Local Tramp Statistics Assume Astonishing Proportions.

Police Officers Have Trouble With a Feeble-Minded Blind Boy Sent Here From Harmony.

Some idea of the enormous number of idle men who drift from city to city can be gleaned from the number of applications for shelter made at the police station. Since November 1st, just three months ago, two thousand, two hundred tramps have been given shelter at the station house. Possibly this is not half the number who have come to Fort Wayne and slept in barns, hallways, etc. The number who applied last month was 820

A SAD SIGHT.

Officer Paul, of the night police force, had a time with a feeble-minded blind boy at the south depot at 2 o'clock this morning Some days ago application was made from Harmony, Clay county, Ind, for the admission of a sixteen year old boy named Robert E. McVay. The lad was accepted and yesterday sent to this city. However, instead of sending someone along to look after the lad, the relatives turned him over to the conductor. Mr Paxson, of the feeble minded institute, was at the depot two or three times yesterday looking for the lad, but did not expect him on the night train. En route to this city the conductor and trainmen had a fearful time with the boy. He bit and fought like a wild beast and Officer Paul had to send for the patrol wagon and have the boy looked up at the police station, when he arrived. During the night Robert tore nearly all his clothing off and was a sorry sight when Mr Paxson arrived at the station this morning to take him to the institute The poor little fellow crouched down in one corner of the cell and mumbled and jibbered in a shocking manner, biting his fingers and tearing at his clothing. The boy was at once taken out to the institute.

POLICEMEN AT PLAY.

Yesterday afternoon a dozen or more of the night policemen went to the Princess Rink for a frolic. Whether advised to do so by the board of health or board of safety no one has yet been able to determine. They took Lieutenant Lapp along to summon the ambulance, if necessary, but the lieutenant was himself overcome with a conniption fit when Sergeant Daseler ran into Night Clerk Hoham and swallowed his false teeth. Hoham is still looking for his breath. Driver Saunders had on three pairs of skates—one on his hands, knees and feet—and then he couldn't slide. Some of the newspaper reporters went over to show the "cops" how to skate and slide around like greased marbles on a window glass.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

Miss Snyder Writes to Her Christian Endeavor Friends.

Miss S. S. Snyder, a lady who left this city some time ago to engage in missionary work in Sendai, Japan, writes an interesting letter to her Christian Endeavor friends here in which she gives an interesting account of life as she finds it among the Japanese.

Her description of the houses in which the natives of that country live is especially interesting. "They are very different from the American houses," she writes, "and the representation of a Japanese village as seen at the World's fair was by no means a good one. At Chicago their houses were nice and new, but here in Japan they are very old and queerly built, most of them being but one story high, and with the walls made of bamboo and mud mortar.

"Many of the houses," she continues, "are very poor and would not be used as woodsheds by the people in America, but some of the hou[illegible] owned by the more wealthy [illegible] quite good The government [illegible] are constructed after forei[illegible] and are quite good."

Miss Snyder, with [illegible]rly occupied by [illegible]neral. She de[illegible] gives a diagram [illegible]etter by saying [illegible]rtable and while [illegible] without many [illegible] in America she [illegible]e asks for the [illegible]eople and urges [illegible]uses of missions.

Finance Committee Think Well of the Peddler Ordinance.

Business Men Meet With Them in the City Hall Last Evening to Talk Over the Matter.

Last evening at the city hall a number of business men and other citizens met with the finance committee of the city council for the purpose of urging the passage of the new ordinance regarding the licensing of peddlers and hawkers. The ordinance was introduced by Councilman Waltemath and on January 8th was referred to the committee on finance.

The ordinance provides that all persons engaged in peddling fruits, vegetables, eggs, butter, poultry, beets or other farm product, fish, goods, wares, medicines, merchandise or other articles of value within the city, shall be compelled to take out a license.

When these articles are sold from wagons a license fee of $50 per year must be paid on each wagon and no license for less than a year can be taken out. Persons selling from baskets, or carts, or carrying their wares on their person in any manner must also take out a license for one year, paying therefor $20 for a full twelve months. The ordinance further provides that the license shall not be transferred and that where the goods are sold from a vehicle it must be provided with a card two feet long and twelve inches wide conspicuously displayed and reading "Licensed Vendor." Peddlers without wagons (as well as those with them) must always have their license ready to show if such is demanded.

Section 5 of the ordinance gives exceptions as follows

"No license granted or issued under any provision of this ordinance shall be so construed as to entitle any person to the privilege of occupying the stand in any market space or market house, street, lane, alley or commons with table, bench or otherwise; nor authorize the sale, huckstering, peddling or hawking of any article of provisions, vegetables or farm products by a licensed vender upon or in any of the market spaces or market houses of the city or in the streets contiguous thereto during the market hours Nor shall any of the provisions of this ordinance be so construed as to authorize the sale of goods, wares and merchandise or any articles of provision or vegetables, or farm products by auction or public outcry. Nor shall any of the provisions of this ordinance be so construed as to prevent any farmer or producer from selling at any time or in any place within the city any article of provision or vegetable grown or purchased by him or to persons selling exclusively at wholesale to retail dealers in the city."

Section 6 of the ordinance provides that any person selling unhelesome food such as produce, poultry, meat, fish or adulterated or unhelesome milk shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined not less than $5 or more than $50, and the mayor may revoke the license.

The committee, after hearing the citizens, announced that they would unanimously report in favor of the ordinance when it came up for its final reading and passage on February 12th.

Whether it will then pass the council is another question.

WHAT THEY EAT.

Daily Bill of Fare at the Hotel De Clausmeier.

A SENTINEL reporter dropped into the county jail last evening just as the prisoners were sitting down to their evening meal. If anyone imagines it is fun to be confined to this institution he is badly mistaken. Thirty prisoners, of all ages and nationalities, sat by the long tables and tackled their supper as though they enjoyed it. Not a word was spoken and as fast as each man finished he turned about on the bench and sat with his back to the table, apparently as well satisfied as though he had just finished one of Dick's game dinners Prison fare is not noted for its variety, but after pounding stone all day most anything in the way of edibles will pass. Here is the daily bill of fare at the Hotel de Clausmeier:

BREAKFAST.
Coffee, Molasses, B[illegible]

DINNER.
Soup, Meat, Beans, Potatoes, Bread.

SUPPER
Bread, Molasses, Coffee.

While this menu does not readily appeal to the stomach of an epicure, yet it is as good, if not better, than the average prison fare. Each man gets one-half of a loaf of bread at a meal and plenty of coffee and molasses. The dinner meal is the principal meal of the day and at that time each man gets one-half pound of meat Then the bill of fare is varied every now and then, and as everything about the table is scrupulously neat, the prisoners seldom if ever complain of their treatment at the hands of Sheriff Clausmeier and his obliging deputies.

THE farmers' institutes that have been held during the past two months in various parts of the state, were uniformly largely attended, and awakened deep interest in the matter of progressive and successful farming.

THE Democratic State Editorial association will meet at Indianapolis on the 7th of February—Thursday of next week. Secretary F. D. Haimbaugh requests a full attendance. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected.

THE SENTINEL on Wednesday demonstrated its ability to cover important events happening in whatever part of the world they may occur, quickly and comprehensively. The first bulletin, announcing the wreck of the steamship Elbe, which occurred on that day, reached THE SENTINEL shortly after 2 o'clock and our edition which went to press at 3 o'clock gave a half column account of the casualty.

THE senate has agreed to the treaty with Japan. It places us in relation to that country in the same position as exists between us and the oldest and most humane governments in the western world. The treaty does not go into effect for five years. The treaty is identical with that concluded between Japan and Great Britain. The chief objection to it is that it places foreigners in Japan at the mercy of the local tribunals and up to this time there is no reason to expect that greater justice would be shown them in that country than in China. Five years may work considerable progress in the judicial department of the flowery kingdom, which is modeled in part on that of France and in part on that of England.

THERE will be no suspension of the gold payments by the United States treasury. All danger of that is now past. President Cleveland's stand has saved the national credit. Information has reached the government to the effect that a new loan can be floated in large part abroad. In a few weeks the flow of gold will be from Europe to America. The president and the treasury department at Washington feel satisfied that the storm which has been so long gathering will break without doing serious harm. They are assured there will be a successful floating of a hundred million loan and that influences are at work which will stop the large exportation of gold from this country. Foreign banking houses, representing holders of the bonds of this government to the extent of hundreds of millions, are to take part in the placing of a new loan of a hundred millions of 4 per cent thirty-year bonds.

Three Subjects of Interest.

Tomorrow's SENTINEL, as is always the case with our Saturday's issue, will be an attractive number, containing, as it will, a number of interesting articles upon special subjects. We have not the time today to speak in detail of each of these articles, but we will, however, call the attention of our readers to three of them, because they will recognize by the illusion to them that they will possess sufficient interest and importance to create a desire for their perusal

The first article to which we refer is one entitled, "The Six Presidents of France." The third republic of France dates from September 4, 1870, immediately after the downfall of Napoleon III, at the close of his disastrous war with Germany. Louis Adolphe Thiers was elected president August 31, 1871, served as chief executive but two years, three months and seven days and resigned May 24, 1873. Since then France has had five presidents, all of whom have resigned, except one who was assassinated. Tomorrow's SENTINEL will give the life histories of these presidents and in connection with the article we will publish portraits of each of these rulers.

Another article will be one giving the biographies and pictures of the speakers who have been elected this year by twelve of the state legislatures of the union—Fessenden, of Connecticut; Walton, of Pennsylvania; Cross, of New Jersey; Fish, of New York; Gordon, of Michigan; Adams, of Indiana; Meyer, of Illinois; Van Sant, of Minnesota; Lobdell, of Kansas; Russell, of Missouri; Smith, of Texas; Tipton, of Tennessee. Most of them are lawyers and ten of them republicans. The article besides giving their life careers, tells of their personal characteristics and will, we know, prove interesting and instructive to our readers.

The third article is one which relates to our national congress and is a special correspondence written from Washington by THE SENTINEL's contributor, J. B. Parke. It speaks of the newly elected members of congress, giving in detail the personnel of each of them from the different states, the prospects of an extra session and what legislation will and will not probably be enacted. The correspondent handles the matters and things he writes about in an independent manner, giving his own views and THE SENTINEL is not responsible for his opinions of the measures he writes about. The letter will be full of information and will attract attention.

Government Banking.

The financial writer of the New York Sun insists constantly that the United States government is already in the banking business and in heavily. He says:

> If the government ought not to issue notes to serve as money because it ought not to do banking, it ought not to continue its supervision of the national banks and the sale of postoffice money orders, and it should change its whole present fiscal system into one from which every element of banking shall be excluded.
> The fact seems to be entirely overlooked that the United States treasury is, and for more than half a century has been, in a certain sense, the biggest bank in the country and has done a vastly bigger business in the way of receiving and paying out money, which was originally the peculiar function of a banker, than any other institution. By the independent treasury act of 1840, which was the outcome of General Jackson's long and bitter war upon the United States bank, the custody of the entire national revenue was placed in the hands of the government and has ever since remained there. Two years after the passage of this act congress passed a bill intended to establish what was to be called the Fiscal Bank of the United States, but President Tyler, to the great disgust of the party which had elected him vice president, vetoed it, and no effort has since been made to pass another like it

The bureau of American republics learns that three South American republics, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia, have agreed to submit at least one difference to arbitration. There is a question concerning the real ownership of 30,000 leagues of land lying about the headwaters of the Amazon river. The land is at present held by Peru. Before the independence of Venezuela, Colombia and Ecuador this land was part of the Spanish state of New Granada. It has accordingly been taken for granted that Spain knows more about the question in dispute than any other nation, and Spain has been asked to arbitrate. When Spanish American republics can settle a difference by peaceful arbitration, it looks as though other nations ought to be able to do so.

Premiums for speed above the requirements will be no longer given by the United States to the builders of naval vessels. This is right. Builders, contractors and designers ought to have patriotism enough in their souls to make their country's warships the fastest on the globe without any other reward than the satisfaction to be drawn from that fact and from the appreciation of their grateful fellow countrymen. It is just as well, once in awhile still to do something for pure love of one's country. It will have a good effect on the school children.

What Congressman Dingley thinks of the Alaska sealing trade as settled by the Paris arbitration tribunal is shown in the bill he introduced into the house. The bill is a most sarcastic one. It provides that the secretary of the treasury shall cause all the Alaska seals now in ...ence to be slaughtered, skinned and ...ides properly cured. THE FARM NEGRO AND HIS LOVE OF SPORT.

Remarkable Habits of Close Observation. Peculiar Superstitions—The Possum Hunt—Fishing In the Old Millpond—Stories Told at the Mill—Social Amenities.

[Special Correspondence.]

JAMISON, S. C., Jan. 29.—The first time in his life that a negro boy has anything which he can call his own he swaps it for a dog that can run rabbits and squirrels. He trains the dog to bring these rabbits and squirrels to him when they are caught, no matter how much the dog might like the taste of fresh meat himself. When the negro boy has attained the importance of being able to earn a little money by hoeing or picking cotton, gathering peas, shucking corn, driving a wagon or other occupation, he buys a gun, usually a cheap one, with a single barrel and old fashioned manipulations. This weapon is likely to explode when not expected to do so and not to explode when it ought to, but nevertheless it is a gun precious beyond compare in its owner's estimation. It is kept up in the loft or in some secret corner of the cotton house, where thieves may not break in and steal, and as often as possible the owner visits it, rubs it up, examines it over and over again, aims it at various imaginary objects and otherwise delights in his darling possession. Every Saturday after the game laws are "out" these firearms are popping and cracking in every direction on the plantation, and dogs are barking and running hither and thither in pursuit of rabbits, squirrels, partridges or doves. All the boys on the place are on hand, for those not fortunate enough to possess guns themselves are almost as delighted to attend the lucky sportsman who is to bring down the game. A negro boy of 10 years knows the peculiar note or whistle of every bird that inhabits his native woods and swamps. He knows the nature of these birds, whether they remain in the neighborhood all winter, whether the male and female of a certain species have the same note or cry, what kind of nests they have, whether they build them near to the ground or in more inaccessible places. He is familiar with the appearance and habits of these little songsters and calls them by names indicative of certain peculiarities which he or his fathers before him have discovered, without regard to what ornithologists may denominate them.

Bird Lore.

"Dere goes a shittail!" calls one of a group of small darkies, defiling along a pine woods lane, each crowned with a weighty sack of meal, white in contrast to their dusky faces, each looking with eager interest after the bird that has flitted across the way in front of them. The most conspicuous feature of this bird as he flies is the decided glint of white in his wing; hence the homely appellation with which he has been christened.

"Dat dere's a t'rasher!" these small woods craftsmen will declare, "an dere's his waitin man," indicating a modest appearing brown bird, such as is often seen in company with the thrasher, and which it is insisted the thrasher makes wait upon him.

"De t'rasher oversee de job, but he waitin man got to do all de fiyin 'bout an fetchin ob de sticks an straws for mek he house," explain the little naturalists, and then they will go on to tell you that nobody ever sees a blue jay on Friday, and the reason of their absence is that on that day of the week they are obliged to go to hell.

"Blue jay am de debble's own bird," they say. "He an all he tribe done gifted an giv' ober to do ole boy, dat mek dey neber mix wid no udder kind ob bird an always fightin and cuttin up."

Every bush and shrub of the numerous kinds in the southern woods has its individual meaning for the negro, and he knows the names of all the various species of trees, all the different kinds of oaks and what they are good for.

"My baby will be a year ole, risin two, when de maple tree blossom red," some buxom matron will say as she displays her sturdy offspring, or she will date his birth from "de time de gessamine fust come," or say, "Dey begin to haul cotton to de gin when he was two day ole."

Out For the Possum.

Passing the average negro house at dusk of a winter's evening one will find the large and small boys of the family, often the sober father himself, engaged in selecting choice pieces of "lightwood" to do duty as torches for use on a possum or coon hunt. The negro rarely takes a gun with him on a possum hunt. Plenty of lightwood to aid him in looking out for snakes and a good sharp ax with which to fell the tree in which the game takes refuge, perhaps a stout stick to help him break through the thicket, usually complete his hunting outfit. The night selected is always on "the dark of the moon." "Possum's cute," they say, and knows well enough that his shadow will betray him on a moonlit night, so he stays in hiding. 'Tis only in the dark that he walks abroad. Lenient landlords, with an abundance of timbered land, do not prohibit the cutting down of trees for the sake of securing a possum or two, and many a noble pine and stalwart sweet gum fall prostrate in the watches of the night amid the yelping of the dogs and the shouts and calls of the sable hunters.

Angling.

Occasionally, when game seems to be shy and the hunt not promising, the possum hunter will kindle a fire right there in the swamp, within a few feet of some black, sluggish looking, winding stream, and go to sleep, depending on the voice of his dog to rouse him when that alert and faithful animal shall have "treed." The young negroes, as a rule, go hunting in company, roveling in the fun of a merry party, but the older heads often go totally alone, spending night after night in the dense swamps that edge the fields, their dog their only companion, undeterred by the presence of owls and bats and myriad crawling reptiles from enjoying their fascinating pursuit. On a spring evening, or any time after the fish have begun to run up stream, one will find all the darkies fixing their nets, fishing canes, lines and hooks, hunting up cans for bait, etc., to set out for the adjacent ponds and creeks, there to spend the greater part of the night angling for the fish, which abound in the southern waters. And this is a pursuit in which the women join with the men. All along the banks of the creeks and ponds lights are gleaming and torches flashing where these night fisherman are seeking to inveigle the finny tribe. If the plantation boasts a water mill, as most plantations do in that well watered country, and if that water mill is not only for grinding corn and ginning cotton, but also for sawing logs, then the fishing is particularly seductive, for then whole parties can go "gigging."

The miller is persuaded to shut off nearly all the water from the flooding or sheet... just below his mill gates, and on this ... surface the unsuspecting fish are ... is, spear —throst throu... ...ith a ...iniature pitchfo... ...ed for. the p...

Social Sports.

When one watches a group of plantation negroes, many of whom are middle aged men or even grandfathers, assembled at the mill, where they have taken their corn to be ground on a winter's evening, their marvelous vitality, unequaled good nature and measureless contentment with life impress the beholder. Two stalwart men will get to wrestling to entertain the onlookers, or else a half dozen will undertake to surpass each other's agility in jumping long distances, and before the party breaks up some well known local "shuffler" will make the bare rough platform over the mill race resound with the measured patting and kicking and toeing in and out of his nimble feet, some one of the bystanders clapping his hands in that peculiar rhythmic fashion which the darkies have. Many will be the tales of "Jack o' my lanterns" and "spirits," sworn to as true, told round the blazing lightwood logs, and later some one will come up with a rabbit or possum, or perhaps a newly acquired ration of meal and meat, and cook it right there on that open fire, sharing it readily with any who are hungry.

OLIVE F. GUNBY.

SOME STORIES OF DOGS.

They Are Offered Apropos of the Imminent Opening of the Bench Show Season.

[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, Jan 29.—The bench show season will shortly begin, and then the annual wave of dog stories will surge through the land. In fact, it has already reared its awful crest, as I discovered yesterday during a two hours' ride in the smoking car of an accommodation train.

As is always the case on such a train, the personnel of the passengers was constantly changing, but there were two men besides myself who remained in the car as long as I did, and they both had a few dog stories to tell. I started the trouble, innocently enough, by speaking of Strip, the dog that was employed in London two or three years ago to insert electric wires in subways

"That's a good story, stranger," said the man who was sitting in the seat with me as he bit off a big chew of plug cut, "but lemme tell you about a dog I know about. This dog was in New Jersey five or six years ago, and he was just naturally the knowingest dog on four legs. He belonged to a man named Young in Flagtown, Somerset county. Ever been down there? Well, if you had, you'd have heard of Young's dog Frank. Frank is a liver and white mottled, full bred Ridgeway setter, and Young has trained him till you can't rest. As a sporting dog he's the best I ever saw, but it's in other things that he is really great. When Young gets up in the morning, he yells to Frank.

"'Get me my duds, old chap,' Young says, and you ought to see that dog gather up the clothes.

"Whenever Young wants to go walking, he lets Frank know, and the dog jumps on the rack and gets his master's hat. He'll carry a note to any one and wait for the answer, and when Young is cutting kindling wood the dog carries the sticks into the kitchen and puts them in the woodbox. More than one man had tried to buy Frank when I heard about him, but Young used to say there wasn't enough money in Somerset county to get that dog."

"When I was up in Winnipeg two or three years ago," said a man wearing a fur cap who sat in front of us, "I heard about a dog that went out with his master shooting. There were plenty of prairie chickens that day, and the dog pointed 'em all right, and the man shot every time, but for some reason he didn't hit any bird. Well, finally he quit and started home. The dog seemed to be awfully downhearted, but when they got almost to the house he got excited and grabbed the man's coat, like he wanted to lead him somewhere. Well, the man had to go, and where do you suppose the dog led the fellow? Well, sir, it was straight to the market, and when he got the man there he gave one look at the hundreds of prairie chickens there for sale, and then he just pointed, and he wouldn't go away till the man had bought."

The man who was sitting with me seemed to take this story as a direct reflection on the truth of the one he had told and straightway retorted with another, which was manifestly invented, and then the man with the fur cap told of a dog that could chew tobacco and expectorate as accurately as Dickens' Mr. Challop, whose exploits were recorded in "Martin Chuzzlewit." I am not sure how long they would have continued their rivalry if I had not silenced both by telling about the swimming races between dogs that were carried on near Boston two or three years ago. Although this story of mine was perfectly true, and the result of the races was printed in the newspapers the day after their occurrence, both my companions evidently thought me a romancer whom they could not hope to outlie, and the conversation was abruptly changed.

Put Off.

There is a young lady living out in the west end who teaches a class at a mission Sunday school in the suburbs. Each Sunday she encourages the children to be present on the following Sunday by giving them a hint in glowing terms of what the next lesson will be.

Last Sunday, as usual, she told them that next Sunday's lesson would be about Lot's wife—how she disobeyed and looked over her shoulder, and how she was turned into a pillar of salt.

While the rest of the class were revolving the wonderful story in their minds in open mouthed astonishment there were two soiled fingers shaking violently over the heads of the balance, and when the young lady asked for the question the owner of the fingers exclaimed:

"Teacher, did they eat the salt?"

The young lady's forethought is the better part of her wisdom. She was puzzled only for a moment. She smiled upon the tot who had given her such a close call and answered:

"Oh, you must come next Sunday and hear."—Cincinnati Tribune.

His Great Scheme.

"I have a scheme," said the man of ideas.

"You always have," said his friend.

"Yes, but this is a good one. It is worth millions, and if you will advance me half a dollar to get a pork and bean dinner I'll let you in on the ground floor."

The other hesitatingly handed over the half dollar.

"Now, what's your scheme?" said he.

"Why, I'm going to the west and show the people how to build cyclone proof cities."

"How will you make them cyclone proof?"

"Why, I'll build them all on wheels, so when the people see a cyclone coming they can hitch a couple of traction engines to them and pull them out of the way."—Leavenworth Times.

GENTS—I think it my duty to send this statement to you of the benefit I have received from LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. I have been afflicted for twenty years with stomach trouble of the severest nature. Would have seasons of the severest suffering from one to two months at a time. Between these times of suffering was never longer than three months. There was never any time that I was entirely free from misery more or less. These spells of great suffering would sometimes come on with sickness and vomiting, and other times would come on in form of rheumatism, but would finally center itself in my stomach. I have doctored with a great many physicians, but none of them could tell me what the trouble was. I was unable to get relief until I got LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS It is now sixty days since I began taking this medicine, and am now for the first time in twenty years free from pain and misery. I am compelled to say it is a blessing to a poor man.

HARVESTING CORN.

A New Hampshire Method Which Affords Suggestions to Other Sections.

A New Hampshire correspondent of The New England Homestead describes his plan of harvesting the corn crop. It is not without good points for some other localities. He says:

I plant my corn in sections of 12 rows, skip three, plant 12 more, skip three,

and so on. I plant potatoes, peas or anything that can be harvested before the corn in those three rows, as shown below:

xxxxxxxxxxxx . . . xxxxxxxxxxxx . . .

xxxxxxxxxxxx . . . xxxxxxxxxxxx . . .

For a harvesting wagon I take the axle, A A, and wheels of my hay rigging and take two stout poles, B B, and attach them to the rocker and hind axle the same as to a hay rigging, and then bore four holes, C C C C, in each pole. I then put four stakes, D D D D, in each pole underneath and let them hang down 18 inches from the top of the poles, then put the crosspieces on from one stake to the other and pin them fast and lay a couple of boards on the crosspieces for the bottom and put one on each side. Put a piece in front and one behind, and that forms a box. Use wooden pins or bolts to fasten the pieces together. This rigging is drawn to the first gangway, a bar driven in the ground and the horse hitched. I pick the ears of corn first and put them in this rigging. I take six rows on each side of the gangway, and when I come to the next gangway I do the same, and so on until the piece is covered. The ears of corn are put in a large open chamber and husked at my leisure.

Then I make a horse for shocking corn.

Take a small pole and bolt the legs to the pole and bore a hole for the pin. The cornstalks are shocked as I go along. I take six rows, three on each side of the horse, and bind the shocks with rope. There will be two rows of shocks in a section. I use the same rigging to draw my cornstalks to the barn, and the shocks are easily taken off. I put my cornstalks just where I want them and do not disturb them until fed out. There is no waste in feeding. I do my work all alone without any help. This is the cheapest way and best to harvest the corn crop that I know of.

The Complete Fertilizer.

It is commonly said that a "complete" fertilizer need contain only the three mineral elements which are usually deficient in the soil—viz, potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen. Practically, however, we find that, though a soil may be rich in each of the elements which go to make up the plant, it is impossible to secure good or even fair crops unless it contains, in addition to those, a liberal supply of humus, which is formed whenever vegetable matter decays in the soil, and it is in the formation of this material that the practice of plowing under green crops has its greatest value. It is plentiful in all fresh soils, but becomes exhausted by continued cultivation in hoed crops, especially in the hill lands, and the supply must be renewed before chemical fertilizers can be used to advantage. It is the necessary foundation of all fertility, and without it the use of any commercial fertilizer is sure to be disappointing. If the fertilizers used do not contain humus making material, it must sooner or later be supplied by the plowing under of green crops or by turning the land out to rest.—Farmers' Review.

Hens and Grapevines.

An English authority calls attention to the fact that some of the best French poultry emanate from the wine districts of France. In the Medoc, where claret comes from, they are to be seen in large numbers, although the vines are not more than 15 inches in height. Here they are given full liberty and allowed to wander where they like for ten months in the year, only being removed during July and August, when the grapes are ripening. Instead of being injurious, they are found very serviceable indeed in clearing the vines of insects and grub, cleaning the land and supplying it with a valuable manure. This arrangement fits in with the requirements of poultry, for by the beginning of July there has been a great reduction in numbers, the chickens for marketing purposes having all been killed by that time, and thus the stock is more limited in number than it would be earlier in the year.

Circumventing the Army Worm.

As a rule, the remedies are applied too late. In general, it may be said that as soon as the worms are discovered to be exceptionally numerous in a given field all energy should be devoted to the protection of the surrounding crops by plowing a furrow about the field, with its perpendicular side toward the territory to be protected. The destruction of the worms in the fields first attacked may be safely left to the last part of the work. Clean cultivation, rotation of crops, clearing up fence corners, close pasturage, the burning of waste grass land in spring or fall, are all preventive measures of great value.

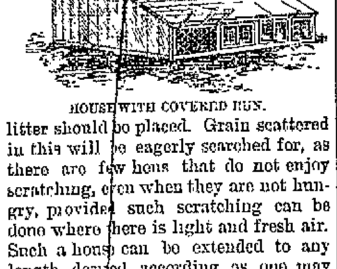

WINTER POULTRY HOUSE.

It Secures the Necessary Exercise For Fowls During Cold and Rainy Seasons.

There is no denying the fact that fowls need exercise in the open air during the winter season to secure the best results with them, but with the ordinary poultry house this is almost impracticable. If the outside door and windows are opened, in comes the rain, hail, sleet or chilling wind that renders the house too cold. Webb Donnell illustrates in The Country Gentleman a successful attempt to solve this problem of securing open air exercise for fowls during inclement weather.

The house is the familiar shed roofed affair, but having in this case a projection in front, separated entirely from the main apartments to be used as a scratching room. It is entered from the main room by small doors that can be closed at night, while the outside air and sunshine are admitted through small windows close to the ground. These glass windows can be raised during the day, the fowls and the litter being kept within by wire netting.

This scratching room should have a generous coating of loam upon the floor, and upon this cut hay, straw or other litter should be placed. Grain scattered in this will be eagerly searched for, as there are few hens that do not enjoy scratching, even when they are not hungry, provided such scratching can be done where there is light and fresh air. Such a house can be extended to any length desired, according as one may desire to keep a greater or smaller number of fowls.

Marketing the Honey Crop.

The advice of The American Bee Journal is to cultivate local markets. There are many risks in shipping comb honey, especially to distant markets, with the facilities and skill for crating properly possessed by the average beekeeper. But little comb honey ever reaches its destination without damage and loss to the producer. The authority referred to says: "For some years we have made special effort to introduce extracted honey in our own local markets, and by having our goods of the very highest quality we have in three seasons easily established a demand for all the liquid honey we can produce. The same can be done in each locality, provided none but first class, properly cured honey is offered. We advise taking a sample of the honey for testing, visiting the best families in town and country, taking orders and delivering the goods, being careful to have the honey equal or better than the sample. In this way we find a market for all our extracted honey at 12½ cents per pound. Comb honey can be sold in the same way. This year the crop is so small there is no need of any haste in selling, and those who rush to sell for the first offer are sure to suffer loss."

Grasshopper Catching Machines.

The fields in many sections of the country this season have been black with locusts and grasshoppers. Catching machines and "hopper dosers" have been constructed in a variety of designs for the annihilation of the pests. In Colorado the "hopper dosers," with kerosene pans at the bottom, are extensively used and are very successful. They cost only a few dollars, are mounted on runners, like a sled, but are operated much the same as the one in the accompanying sketch from the Pennsylvania Grit.

This consists of a wide open canvas frame mounted upon four wheels. Inside the frame is an endless wire screen, passing between two rollers. The hoppers, caught by the wide open mouth, are thrown upon the wire, crushed between the rollers and drop to the ground. This machine is pushed by a horse fastened behind, so that there is here almost literally exemplified a condition of "cart before the horse."

Government on Feeding Wheat.

The agricultural department at Washington has issued a bulletin on feeding wheat to stock. The bulletin advocates the use of screenings and low grade of wheat as animal food and the placing of only the best wheat on the market. Equal parts of wheat and corn prove better for fattening animals than either of these grains alone. For growing animals corn is plainly not so suitable as is wheat or oats. When wheat and corn are the same price per bushel, it is preferable to feed wheat and sell corn. Wheat should at first be fed in small quantities. It should, when possible, be mixed with some other grain, and care should be taken to prevent any one animal from getting more than the quantity intended for it. These precautions are especially necessary when wheat is fed to horses. The best form in which to feed wheat is to roll or grind it into a coarse meal. It may then be fed alone or mixed with cornmeal or ground oats.

The best information now obtainable shows that the practice of feeding wheat to farm animals has become common among the farmers and feeders of Kansas. Even those of Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri are, to a limited extent, feeding their wheat instead of selling it at present shipping prices.

WHY IT WAS UNFINISHED.

She Explained the Delay, and It Was Made Right.

Both were young, and she was fair. He had been calling on her seven evenings and one afternoon a week for six months. Still nothing was settled, although he was in the habit of lingering before jewelers' show windows and asking every young married man of his acquaintance if it really did not cost as much to keep one as two. As for her, she was spending 16 hours a day over the embroidering of table linen, which, instead of dedicating to the family use, she carefully locked away as soon as finished. Meanwhile the sister next in succession was clamoring for the reversion of the parlor, and the younger brothers sat in the seat of the scornful.

One evening he noticed an unusual abstraction in her manner.

"You are not offended with me?" he asked. "I know I didn't get here until 12 minutes past 8, but the car stopped in the tunnel and"—

"Offended? Not at all," and she gazed dreamily into the fire.

"Perhaps you are ill, then. You know you had lost a pound and a half last time we were weighed, and you haven't eaten all the candy I brought yet. You must be very careful of your health."

The absent gaze wandered over his head. "I am quite well, thank you, only a little thoughtful. The serious problems of life must sometimes present themselves to one's mind."

"You can't decide whether to have a jacket or a cape? Or is it whether to have your photographs profile or three-quarter face?"

"Nothing so frivolous! This is really something important."

"You—you don't think of parting your hair, do you? Or is it possible that you contemplate entering a convent?"

"No, no! I can't tell you what it is, but"—

"I see it now—I see it all!" he burst forth. "You are expecting that Miller fellow. Well, I will say good evening. I would not interfere with such a delightful visit."

"I don't see why you say 'that' Miller. I think him a charming fellow."

"So does he. Good evening, Miss Daisy."

"I—why, what is your hurry?"

"You said that you expected Miller and"—

"Why, I said nothing of the kind! He is calling on Julia this evening. I saw his shadow on the ... has such absurd ears."

"Oh, well, Miller i... low! But you haven't ... you are thinking of."

"Oh, I can never tel... think it silly. You are ... at it."

"Can it be about the ... en?"

"How clever of yo... ever guess? But I can ... you."

"Then I shall think it a joke at my expense. I insist on knowing."

"Oh, it's not a joke at all, but if you insist"—

"I do insist."

"But, Mr. Smiffkins, I really can't. Well, if you will know. I have finished embroidering enough of it—well, enough for a—a small family, and now I don't know what initial to put on it, and it naturally makes me rather thoughtful."

The next day she took her linen down town and had the letter "S" stamped on every piece.—Chicago Tribune.

Trees In French Cities.

One of the chief beauties of the larger French cities and second only to their edifices and monuments are the trees. The almost interminable vistas of chestnuts and acacias stretching along the broad and well paved avenues as far as the eye can reach, their bending branches almost touching one another in an endless arch of verdure, form not only a delightful perspective for the eye, but serve to add beauty to cities already beautiful and grace and symmetry to whatever might be harsh and forbidding.

This, however, is not the result of nature's handiwork alone, for science and art have lent their aid. The planting, as well as the maintenance of the trees in French cities, is an item of no little importance in the annual budget prepared by the municipal council, which does not look upon their preservation as of less consequence than the repairing of the roadways or the lighting of the streets.—London Times.

WORTHY MAN HONORED.

D. F. Crawford the Recipient of a Handsome Present.

A Number of Our Citizens Moving to St. Louis—Fireman Schwabe Falls Off His Engine.

Mr. D. F. Crawford, who has been the assistant master mechanic of the Pittsburg shops for the past three years, left last evening for Pittsburg, where he will enter a course of study in electricity at the works of the Westinghouse people. Previous to his departure he was summoned to the store room office, where, in the following neat little speech, Mr. Enoch Cox, in behalf of the heads of the departments of the of the various departments of the shops and the clerks therein, presented Mr. Crawford with a set of elegantly bound books upon "Electricity." Mr. Cox said:

"The Good Book, which we all read more or less and with which you are doubtless perfectly familiar, recites that the early command of God to man was: 'Go forth and subdue the earth.' As the result of my religious meditations I have concluded that the meaning and spirit of that command was, and to this day is: Go forth and subdue the forces of Nature and make them subservient to and tributary to the comfort and profit of mankind. Perhaps of all the latent forces within the metes and bounds of earth, the most intangible, yet powerful, is that of electricity. The investigation and development of this wonderful force, it would seem, is to be the labor of your life. These, your friends, recognize and appreciate your zeal in your special work, and even in our dim, uncultured vision we catch a glimpse of the marvelous mechanical possibilities which electrical art and science have as yet but feebly revealed. It will be your work to assist (may we indulge the hope that you shall lead) in this wonderful revelation. These volumns, which I am commissioned by your friends to present to you, may, we trust, serve incidentally to now and then remind you of their friendship and earnest solicitude for your welfare and prove of substantial aid to you in your future work. We beg you to accept them in appreciation of the generous impulse which actuates the hearts of those who give them. It is their wish that peace, prosperity, health and happiness shall attend you to your new home and abide with you in the years to come. Electrically speaking, may your insulation against the ills and woes of life be perfect; may you never encounter a grounded wire, and, finally, when the Great Electrician throws the switch and the vital current is no more of earth, may your fading vision behold the record of an achievement which shall make your name an inspiration to those who follow in your field of labor."

Mr. Crawford was completely surprised, but during the speech he recovered his composure sufficiently to respond to Mr. Cox, expressing his thanks and appreciation of the token of the kindly feelings and respect entertained for him. There were present at the presentation about forty of the officials and clerks.

MINOR MENTION.

For Fresh Candies, etc., call at Balch-elder's, 29 West Main street.

Nickel Plate Fireman Jerome has taken a leave of absence of a week.

Pete Lauer, of the Pittsburg car shops, severely injured the thumb of his left hand yesterday.

E. Hardendorf, who received a bad scalp wound while working in the Pittsburg lumber yards last Monday, resumed work this morning.

John Lazarus, traffic manager of the Indianapolis, Decatur and Western, will resign soon to take a similar position with the Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City road.

The Queen and Crescent has notified northern connections that the company will make a one fare round trip rate to New Orleans on account of Mardi Gras, February 25 and 26.

George L. Rhodes, who recently resigned as assistant general passenger agent of the Chicago and Rock Island, is to go with E. St. John, general manager of the Seaboard Air-line.

Machinist Fred Olds of the Pittsburg shops, went to Elkhart yesterday to attend the funeral of Mrs. W. H. Baker, mention of whose death was made in a previous issue of THE SENTINEL.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of Connecticut compelling the railways to carry passengers at one cent per mile. It is said to be a direct attack on the New Haven and Hartford road.

The Columbus and Hocking Valley company will discard the sign at crossings of highways reading: "Look out for the cars," and in its place put up one in bold, black letters, "Stop, look and listen."

Passenger engine 167, which is said to be the fastest runner of all Nickel Plate engines on this end of the line, has just came out of the shops and will resume her former run on the fourth district. No. 167 is now as good as new and looks handsome in her new coat of paint.

Pittsburg Engineer Slagle is off duty on account of the illness of his wife.

John Haynes, a carpenter in the shops of Rhinesmith & Simonson, is sick and off duty.

M. H. Morrison, of the Pittsburg blacksmith shop, is off duty, pending repairs to his furnace.

D. L. Carpenter, F. W. Weber and H. C. Rippe, of the Wabash shops, are off duty on account of sickness.

The clerks in the Pittsburg and the Wabash shops are very busy today, making up the January pay rolls.

John Bacht has resumed his work in the Pittsburg tank shop after several days' absence on account of the death of his aunt.

T. G. Hunt, foreman of the car department of the Pittsburg at Chicago, is in the city on business connected with his office.

Boilermaker Henry Geerken spent the biggest portion of last night in repairing the boiler of a Pittsburg engine at Lima, Ohio.

Foreman William Meyers, of the Bass machine shop, was accidentally struck upon the knee by a sledge hammer yesterday and is quite lame.

Machinist John F. Fredericks, of the Bass works, left this morning for Bridgeport, Ohio, to set up a large Bass Improved Corliss engine in a rolling mill.

Charles R. Wermuth, the contractor who is putting up the addition to the Kerr Murray works, had one of his feet crushed by a heavy timber falling upon it this morning.

H. L. Reed, a Nickel Plate fireman, has been promoted from the freight to the passenger service and will have a run with Engineer Ross Germain, between this city and Chicago.

W. C. Heine, of the Wabash shops, was informed by telegraph yesterday of the death of his mother-in-law and has gone to attend the funeral. The deceased did not live in this city.

Railway men say that before last Monday no passenger was ever killed in an accident on the Vandalia. The road has been in operation thirty years and the record is believed to be without a parallel.

A number of Nickel Plate brakemen are sick and off duty, among them being O. E. Lehnecke, T. H. Whitby, A. Bowman and J. Hamilton. G. A. Harrison, who was absent a few days, reported yesterday.

Wabash Fireman R. J. O'Neil, of the Lafayette accommodation, fell and sprained his wrist at Buck Creek last evening. He came to this city this morning and is now at his boarding house on Calhoun street.

Henry Reike is improving and there now appears to be no room for doubt that he will soon be up again. He is a carpenter and when not sick is employed at building engine tanks and pilots at the Pittsburg shops.

W. F. Geller's horse, which was attached to a delivery sleigh, ran away at the Pittsburg depot this morning. The sled was upset and its contents, including the driver, were dumped on the cold, cold earth. No other damage.

J. Auth, the brakeman of the west Nickel Plate local freight, who was injured a week ago while on duty, resumed work last evening. W. L. Stanley, another brakeman, also reported for duty yesterday, after three weeks' sickness.

Martin Shuler, night watchman at the Pittsburg car shops, fell on the icy walk near the shop this morning. Some workmen picked him up and carried him within, where he soon recovered from the shaking up and was able to walk home.

Pittsburg Fireman J. Schwabe fell off his engine at Warsaw last night and dislocated his right shoulder blade and cut and bruised his head. He was brought here at 12 o'clock and Dr. Geo. C. Stemen attended him. Mr. Schwabe resides at No. 39 Laselle street.

Next week the traveling and district passenger men of the Wabash will meet General Passenger Agent Crane at St. Louis. There are thirty-one agents in all, among them R. G. Thompson, of this city. There is a silly rumor in circulation that this meeting will result in the loss of employment to a few of the agents.

Another paper railroad is being built in Kansas. It is called the Chicago, Kansas and Arkansas, and is projected to run from St. Joseph to Little Rock. The "general offices" are located at a crossroads in Doniphan county, Kansas, and an army of officers have been elected. There has been no construction, however.

Next Tuesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Haswell, of Oliver street, Miss Effie Haswell will be married to Mr. John Russell. The groom is a machinist and is employed in the Bowser Oil Tank works. Both prospective groom and bride are well known and popular young people.

W. A. Bowdon, who had been working in Yardmaster Samuel Grable's office as telegraph operator for some months, has been given a position in under Chief Dispatcher Caldwell, in the down town offices of the Nickel Plate. The vacancy in the yard office was filled by C. H. Mock, who had been working during the nights at the same place.

A mysterious fire broke out in the cab of Nickel Plate engine No. 90 yesterday afternoon and before the flames were discovered the paint had been removed from the interior wood work and the engineer's and firemen's cushions were ruined. The engine had, about a half hour previous to the fire, been run in the round house by the hostler. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Next Monday morning the Anthony Wayne Manufacturing company will start its St. Louis factory in operation, employing about thirty workmen, most of whom will go from this city and leave tonight. Among the list are the following, who have been working in the company's shop in this city: William Kempf, Samuel Etsell, Julius Vogler and Frank Etsell. From outside the factory the following will go: John Strebig, O. E. Black, Fred Day and Alex. Reinowald. Capt. F. F. Boltz will have charge of affairs for the company at St. Louis and will also leave for that city tonight.

Patrick Sullivan owns land near Solomonville, A. T., over which the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern built its railroad track last summer, according to Sullivan, without permission. Last Sunday he erected a frame building on the railroad track and surrounded it by a wire fence. He moved his family into the structure and the next train was obliged to halt. When William Garland, president of the railroad, who was on the train, attempted to remove the wire fence, Sullivan leveled a shotgun at the president, warning him to keep hands off, advice which Garland promptly followed. The train was obliged to return and a warrant was issued for Sullivan's arrest. He still effectually blockaded the track, however, although District Attorney Jones says he will remove the obstruction and arrest all parties offering resistance. The case is considered unique in the annals of railroad construction.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

His Letter.

There's the postman! Now the letter
I have waited for is here.
I am his eternal debtor,
Since he's bringing me such cheer.
Yes, he's coming! Now he's ringing
Briskly at the front door bell.
All my heart with joy is singing,
Yet no words its joy can tell.

Good! I've got it! Finely scented,
Envelope in latest style—
It's from her! She has relented!
I could tell it for a mile!
Quick—in here where it is lighter!
Bless her hearts! My darling one!
She has made my whole life brighter—
Hang the postman! It's a dime!

The highly talented composer and leader, also director of the famous Chautauqua School of Music, Prof. W. F. Sherwin, commends the World's Sweetest Songs in substance as follows: "They are a most charming collection for the home circle. The selections show fine taste and excellent judgment, while the variety is wonderful, stretching away from the simple Cradle Song to Haydn's Aria "With Verdure Clad." They will bring genial sunshine and refinement to the home." tf

WORLD'S SWEETEST SONGS Can now be secured at this office. Parts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 are now on hand. One coupon and ten cents for each part.

BEAUTIFUL TEETH
FRAGRANT BREATH

ENDORSED BY SCIENCE.

"After making a chemical analysis of DR. TARR'S CREME DENTIFRICE I find it an excellent preparation for cleansing the teeth. Nothing of an injurious character has been found. The ingredients used are excellent for the purpose." M. DELAFONTAINE, Analytic Chemist, St. Louis, Mo., Chicago & Chicago

It cleanses, beautifies and saves the teeth. This dentifrice is put in tubes and is more desirable and economical than powder or liquid. It enables, as far as Dentifrice can, the cleansing and preserving elements that chemists say is experienced at the dental chair has proved most valuable.

People wearing bridgework should use this from price, as it is an anti-septic and prophylactic preparation. For sale by all druggists. Take no other.

OUR - - COST - - SALE

Will Positively Close

TOMORROW, SATURDAY NIGHT!

No sale ever before held in this city has been so successful as this 30 days sale.

No store has put before its patrons in a sale like this, so many new choice goods.

Our preparations had been made long before.

WE HAD THE GOODS,

And You Soon Found it Out.

Tomorrow Night

THIS - SALE - CLOSES,

And we are going to make the last day what we will call

THE CRACK DAY OF THE SALE.

It Will Take in All Departments.

Get in Early in the Day.

You know the jams in this store every afternoon, the difficulty in getting waited upon.

THE BIG SALE

OF the C. O. D. Stock continues to grow every day. The Public are taking a lively interest in this great Slaughter Sale of the Lauferty Stock, and we'll take care that the interest does not lag until every dollar's worth of

CLOTHING,

Hats and Furnishing Goods

Is disposed of. Each day's sales surpass the other, and if we keep on with the increase there won't be much left of the stock when we are ready to talk about our new spring merchandise.

LOW PRICES

For GOOD, HONEST MERCHANDISE, is the magnet with which we are drawing this great volume of business. No sale where there has been such utter disregard of cost and values has ever taken place in this city before. We own this stock so cheap that we are prepared to do wonders in the way of low prices and still be able to make a small margin of profit.

OUR DEAR COMPETITORS

Are very much rattled and are doing us an excellent turn in advertising our sale. One prospective competitor, in particular, is driven to such desperation that he has allowed himself to become almost personal in his advertisements. We are simply waiting for

The Infant to be Born

And, in the meantime, we'll attend strictly to our own business and to the charging of our batteries—later on we may deem it business policy to press the button.

A. D. CRAIG

Conducts Interesting Meetings at Hoagland, Ind.

HOAGLAND, Ind, Jan. 29, 1895.

A. D. Craig, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Sunday school convention recently held in Fort Wayne, made a very profitable visit to Hoagland and vicinity last Saturday and Sunday In the afternoon he conducted a Sunday school teachers' meeting and in the evening a Bible reading in the Hoagland church.

After being entertained at the home of Mr. Frank Hubler he took part in three meetings on Sunday, two of them being in the Antioch church, one-half mile west of the little town of Hoagland. His last and best was given to the Christian Endeavor society Sunday evening, his subject was, "How to Get Ready for Our Revival Meetings," which was highly enjoyed by the audience. The different talks did much good in stiring up the people in the interest of Sunday school work.

SUITS FOR DAMAGES

Will be the Result of the Butte Dynamite Explosion.

BUTTE, Mont, Feb. 1.—The coroner's investigation in the death of Fireman George Fifer and fifty-seven others who lost their lives in the frightful explosion of dynamite Tuesday, Jan. 15, has closed, and a verdict was rendered fixing the responsibility on the Kenyon-Kennet Commercial company and the Butte Hardware company, and holding them guilty of criminal negligence. It is probable that a grand jury will be called to pass on the testimony and coroner's verdict, and many suits for damages against the parties mentioned are in preparation.

A very delightful sleighing party was given last evening by Frank Beaver, of Lakeside. The party was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs James A Foster. After a pleasant ride around the city and Mrs. Foster served an oyster supper at their home in Lakeside Those who participated were Maude Jenness, Lulla Currier, Anna Jones, Hazel Pearce, Anna Biddle, Bertha McPhail, Mable Tennant, Louis Raser, Edith Allers, Liora Kanaga, Bessie Ross, Clara Fonfield, Lillian Ortman, Helen Sauer, Hattie Sauer, Madge Ordway, Myrtle Long, Jessie Reitzie, Blanch Liggett, Susie Burnett, Bessie McQuiston and Clyde Dresback, Harry Turner, George Pressler, Frank Pope, Herman Traxler, Baron Long, Redge Andrews, Ed Reitzie, Dayton Jenness, Ray Barrows, Charlie Hughs, Allie Woods, Carl Diether.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Hartnett, of Baker street, to Mr. Frank Carter will take place February 13, at 9:30 a. m., at the Cathedral.

Dr. E. R. Morris and family, of Fort Warren, near Boston, are the guests of Mr. Clement Edgerton, of West Wayne street. Dr. Morris is a physician in the United States army.

Last evening the Misses Katie and Terisa Kalbacher, assisted by Miss Lida Schnelker, of New Haven, delightfully entertained a number of friends at their East Wayne street home from 8 to 12 o'clock. A dainty three course luncheon was served. Among those present were the Misses Margaret and Agnes Baker, Ella Summers, Clara Baltes, May Trentman, Carrie and Mamie Fink, Teresa Webber, Tillie Nusbaum, Katie DeWald, Clara Goeke, Katie Derheimer, Katie Noll, Katie Golden, Celia Amon, Agnes and Mary Fry; Messrs. Justin Roy, Dr Nierman, Tom Golden, Carl Babb, Amos Leroy, Dr. McOscar, Joseph Derheimer, Joe Nusbaum, Tom O'Brien, Ed Baltes, Clem App, Louis Schulte, Henry and Peter Zurback, Henry Kramer, Gust Goeke, Gust Aurentz, John Amen, Ed. Kalbacher and Clem Schackman.

Last evening Summit City lodge No. 36, A. O U. W., celebrated the sixth anniversary of its organization and was royally entertained with short speeches by Brothers Coverdale, Buchman, Havice, Miller, Holverstott, Polhamus, Hench and Conover, of No 36, and Brothers Brown, master workman of No. 50, and Thos Griffin, of No. 19. This lodge was organized six years ago last evening with thirty-one charter members and the roll call of the charter membership list showed quite a number of the charter members present and the death of only one, that of Prof. J. W. Whiteleather. The lodge is in very good financial condition. Before the meeting closed a committee was appointed to confer with the other lodges and make arrangements for a reception to be given February 13 in honor of Grand Master T. D. Neal and Grand Recorder Fred Baker.

It appears to be an unwritten but very potent law that my lady should make up her summer wardrobe while winter winds most violently do rage. To buy organdies, Swisses and muslins in April or May is too prosaic for toleration by the grande dame. Therefore, she who revels in the aforesaid title puts on her furs, and if possible, sallies forth in a snow storm to buy those sheer fabrics that give one a chill just to look upon. There are printed dimities, printed jaconets, printed lawns and lovely chintzes most delicate and enticing to the eye. The astute men know that never can these dainty and summery fabrics appeal so strongly to the senses as now, while winter reigns and thick woolens and heavy stuffs are so necessary Aside from the strictly floral patterns there are some fine white goods with herringbone stripes, with a line of color down each stripe. Ribbon will be the popular trimming for these frocks and in many instances sets of harness in various colors make a single frock resemble and answer the purpose of many

BOILER CLEANSING COMPOUND.

The attention of owners of steam boilers is called to the old and reliable never-failing Boiler Cleansing Compound, Lord's Patent Improved, for the removing of old scales and preventing of new in steam boilers.

This Compound does not vaporize, and is in consequence being successfully used by Refineries, Breweries, Cracker Bakeries, Candy manufactories Hotels, Laundries, and many other establishments where pure live steam is required.

This Compound is substantially endorsed by U. S. Chemists, who have made chemical examinations, proclaiming it absolutely free from acids, agents so often resorted to in compounding so called boiler compounds, often used with fatal results to steam boilers and their connections.

The success of this Compound is the outcome of a lifetime study by a competent firm, and the great secret of their success is, that each and every package is prepared especially to suit the occasion.

This celebrated Compound is manufactured by Thos. C. Warley & Co., (successors to S. W. Lord & Co.,) of Philadelphia, Pa.

BEDLAM LOOSE

Heard and Breckinridge Fight.

The Colonel Strikes at His Opponent,

But the Blow Is Warded Off.

Other Congressmen Interfere at This Juncture,

And the Belligerents are Speedily Parted.

Both Combatants are Arrested by the Sergeant-at-Arms and Made to Apologize.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A scene of the wildest and most intense excitement occurred in the house at the conclusion of the debate on Mr. Hitt's Hawaiian resolution today, growing out of a personal difficulty between Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, and Mr. Heard, of Missouri, in which epithets like, "impertinent puppy," "coward," "scoundrel," "liar," were bandied. One blow was struck when friends interposed and the sergeant-at-arms arrested the two offenders and brought them to the bar of the house where Mr. Breckinridge in the course of an explanation practically challenged Mr. Heard and demanded personal satisfaction.

As well as the tangle of confused events can be unravelled, the encounter occurred in this way: Mr. Heard, who was in charge of the District of Columbia business, cut Mr. Breckenridge, who was attempting to address the house on the Hawaiian resolution by demanding the previous question on the adoption of the resolution. Mr. Breckinridge immediately moved around from the side aisle in which he was standing to the tier of seats where Mr. Heard was located, and hot words followed. Mr. Breckinridge protested against what he called Mr. Heard's rudeness. The latter declared he was only doing his duty. As the voices of the gentlemen rose members rushed thither.

"Impertinent puppy," shouted Mr. Breckinridge.

"Liar," hissed back Mr. Heard.

At the word the white haired Breckinridge, who is a heavily built, stocky man, put his foot on the step on which the benches are located and let drive a right hand blow at Mr. Heard. Mr. Heard, who is a slight and apparently not strong, but rather tall man, with a brown beard, streaked with gray, dodged. In another instant a dozen hands were extended to restrain the Kentuckian and the tide of members swept him twenty feet up the main aisle. But he continued to struggle and wrestle with his captors, Messrs. Pence and Guthwaite.

The house and galleries were in an uproar. Bedlam had broken loose. Over it all the cracks of the speaker's gavel sounded as he attempted to quell the riot on the floor. In firm tones the speaker directed the sergeant-at-arms to arrest the offenders.

Colonel Ike Hill, the deputy, and his assistant, Mr. Robinson, grabbed the silver mace, the emblem of the house's authority, and rushed up the aisle. It was crowded with a seething mass of members. When they had elbowed their way to the scene of the combat Breckinridge was still struggling with those who held him. His antagonist, Mr. Heard, was, too, calmly in his place. Misunderstanding Mr. Pence's attempt to quiet Mr. Breckinridge, who was trembling like an aspen with over wrought excitement, Colonel Hill and his assistant seized both Mr. Breckinridge and Mr. Pence.

"Not Pence," shouted a dozen members, "arrest Heard."

Mr. Heard was pushed into the arms of the deputy sergeant-at-arms. As the two men came together Mr. Breckinridge made a desperate effort to free himself.

"You are a coward and a scoundrel," he yelled at Mr. Heard, but the stalwart Robinson toughly pulled Mr. Breckinridge forward and the two representatives of the American congress were hustled, rather then escorted, to the bar of the house. The speaker ordered all to take their seats. Many of the members did so reluctantly.

"Take it back," shouted Mr. Breckinridge as he glared at Mr. Heard, who stood, like himself, in custody before the bar.

"You called me an impertinent puppy," answered Mr. Heard.

Meantime the speaker, in stentorian tones, was driving the excited and frantic members back with heavy blows of the gavel. Mr. Breckinridge was appealing for recognition but the speaker would not hear him. After all the members were seated he ordered both Mr. Heard and Mr. Breckinridge back to their seats and then recognized the Kentuckian.

With his frame trembling with excitement, his silver hair tumbling back from his forehead, Mr. Breckinridge rose, attempting to contain himself.

Mr. Breckinridge began his apology in humble tones.

"No one," he began, "can regret more than I that any personal difficulty should occur on this floor, but when I thought I had been taken off the floor with great rudeness I went to Mr Heard and said to him that he could not do business in that way. He replied that that was an insolent statement, and that I was 'an impertinent scoundrel.'"

"He said I was a scoundrel," interposed Mr. Heard.

"He called me a liar," went on Mr. Breckinridge, ignoring the interruption. "I ought not to have resented it, Mr. Speaker," he continued, turning to the chair, "but as a Mississippi judge once said, the lie was first assault, and in spite of my white hairs, I could not restrain myself. I apologise to the speaker and to the house. To the gentleman I will say" he added, as he turned and looked squarely at Heard, his voice rising to one of defiance. "I will say that that can not remain between he and I." A scattering burst of applause greeted this. Mr. Breckinridge took his seat. The house gasped at this last statement and sat breathlessly awaiting for the reply.

Mr. Heard then explained the situation. Today, he said had been set apart for District of Columbia business, and he had felt it his duty, when the opposing leaders on the Hawaiian resolution had finished their statements, to demand the previous question.

The gentleman from Kentucky had then hurried over to him and had stated, in a tone which he regarded as an insult, that the house would do no business today. He had, thereupon, demanded the yeas and nays, as he deemed it his duty to do, whereupon the gentleman from Kentucky, in language which he regarded as most offensive, had called him an insolent and impertinent something.

"He followed," said Mr. Heard, his temper rising, "that statement with a practical assault on me. He called me a scoundrel."

"If I said that I withdraw it," interrupted Mr. Breckinridge, with an earnestness that struck some of the members as ludicrous, and they laughed heartily.

"I do not think I said it," continued Mr. Breckinridge.

"And I believe he did say it," said Mr. Heard.

"If after my disclaimer the gentleman still insists I said it," retorted Mr. Breckinridge again flaring up, "I withdraw it; he does not deserve it."

Mr. Heard hastily denied that he intended to question Mr. Breckinridge's veracity, but stated that he meant that in his excitement the gentleman from Kentucky had forgotten what he did say.

"I stated," he continued, "that the gentleman lied. Upon his withdrawing his offensive epithet I will withdraw mine but not before I believe that I have done nothing which it was not my duty and right to do."

Mr. Heard was also applauded when he took his seat.

This ended the wordy combat and in the absence of a motion which might have been made to reprimand the principals in the affair, the house proceeded with the question before it and the excitement soon subsided, although there was much speculation throughout the day as to what would be the outcome.

Mr. Berry, of Kentucky, a friend of both Breckinridge and Heard, was using his good offices after the row toward reconciliating them. Both are said to be possessed of physical courage, but the two men have been friends in the past and it is believed that the matter will be amicably adjusted and that no bloodshed will result.

FREE WHISKY CURE.

Rockford W. C. T. U. to Establish One.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 1.—For some time the local union of the W. C. T. U. has had under consideration the subject of the establishment of a free liquor cure in this city and at a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon it was unanimously voted to do so. The women are in receipt of a proposition from Dr. A. V. Hutchins, of Chicago, who for the past three years has successfully operated his cure for the reclamation of victims of the liquor habit in connection with the work of the W. C. T. U. of the west side in Chicago. The local branch will be established in the temperance rooms, and he offers to treat men for $5 each, or nothing if they have spent their all. Dr. E. L. Clark, of Rockford, will be in charge of the new branch.

Legislative Committee to Be In This City Tomorrow.

The Nicholson Temperance Bill Seems Doomed—Young Republicans Oppose It.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 1.—A resolution has been introduced in the house to investigate the southern hospital for the insane at Evansville.

Representative Nicholson has introduced a congressional apportionment bill in which the Fort Wayne district remains as it is at present.

The benevolent committees will visit the Fort Wayne institution tomorrow.

The committee to visit Fort Wayne will arrive in the city tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Bobilya and Kell will be in Fort Wayne tonight.

CONCERNING NEWSPAPER LIBEL.

Senator Shiveley's bill concerning libel in civil and criminal cases was reported favorably by the senate committee on judiciary. It requires the aggrieved party to serve notice of the suit three days before its filing. The notice shall specify the alleged false and defamatory statement. If it appears on trial that the article was published in good faith, that its falsity was due to a mistake or misapprehension of the facts, and that a full and fair retraction was made, after the mistake was brought to the knowledge of the publisher, then the plaintiff shall receive only actual damages. Actual damages shall be construed to include all damages that the plaintiff may have suffered in respect to his character, property, business, profession or occupation. The bill also contains the provision of the Grubbs libel law.

WILL NOT REDUCE RAILWAY FARE.

The railroad committee of the house has not agreed to report favorably on the bill to reduce railroad fare to two cents a mile, and it will not do so, its members say.

The committee has agreed to report favorably on Representative Van Arsdel's bill providing that county commissioners shall grant a right-of-way over any highway to an electric road, whenever two-thirds of the land owners along the highway shall petition for the road.

SMOTHERING TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION.

It seems certain that there will be two reports from the committee on temperance as to the Nicholson bill. The men who think the management of the republican party in this state rests on them are bringing all possible influences to bear for the indefinite postponement of the bill. Some of them are already going about the general assembly declaring that the author of the bill is a "Quaker and a crank."

The only opposition to the bill so far has come from the young men, who believe they are called on to fix a policy for the party.

No remonstrances against the passage of the bill have been received by the committee. On the other hand, citizens in all parts of the state are sending in petitions for the passage of the bill. The author of the bill is receiving from fifteen to twenty-five letters a day from republicans throughout the state indorsing the bill.

The latest story started by men here in Indianapolis who are trying to bring about the death of the bill is that it is not the product of republicanism, but was written by representatives of the Good Citizens' League. They declare that this fact alone ought to kill the bill.

There are nine members of the committee, and it seems probable that five of them, including the democratic members, will sign a majority report in favor of the indefinite postponement of the bill. Three of the republican members are heartily in favor of the bill. These are Chairman Nicholson and Representatives Aredel and Willis. It is said that at least two other republican members were for the bill, until the party leaders took them to task. The impression is that if the bill comes before the house for consideration, it will be passed with the local option stricken out. The party managers seem to believe that the "steering committee" of the senate will be able to kill the bill if it gets into their hands.

LOCKED UP

Were the Books of the Whisky Trust,

And the Court's Representative Was Not Permitted to See Them—To Blow Open the Safe.

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Developments in the Whisky trust case today were of a sensational nature. The books which Judge Grosscup had ordered examined at Peoria were found to be locked up. An attempt was made to have two of the complainants in the receivership proceedings removed on the ground that they were mere clerks, and grave charges of manipulation of stock were made against prominent officials of the trust. The unexpected developments at Peoria caused considerable consternation in the ranks of the Hartshorne stockholders' committee. Last night Nathan Bijour, of New York, left for Peoria, accompanied by two expert accountants and armed with an order from Judge Grosscup for an examination of the company's books. Early today word was received that access to the books was denied. Mr. Bijour wired that the books were behind the bolts and bars of the company's vaults and that the only man having the combination to the safe was out of town. His request for instructions was answered immediately by a telegram ordering him to secure the books at any cost and by any means and assuring him of support in any methods he might see fit to use. The prospects of a possible safe blowing episode at Peoria did not dismay the stockholders committee in the least. Their attorneys stated that they did not care how the books were secured and were positive that Mr. Bijour would get his experts to work today despite the missing safe combinations.

One of the attorneys for the stockholders' committee admitted in an interview that it was proposed to reach the books at Peoria by violence if necessary.

"The court has ordered these books examined," he said, "and we will examine them if dynamite is strong enough to open the vault. This afternoon Mr. Bijour was wired at Peoria to use dynamite in getting at the books, and I have no doubt that he will do so, if he finds it necessary. We are not to be stopped by any trickery on the part of the opposition. Mr. Bijour and his accountants arrived in Peoria at 7 o'clock today and went immediately to the offices of the whisky trust. The offices were practically deserted. No one was there but Ben Greenhut, son of President Greenhut. He informed Mr. Bijour that head bookkeeper Magee was the only man that could give the combination and that Mr. Magee had left for Chicago at 11 o'clock last night. The wire correspondence followed and we are now awaiting developments at Peoria."

FOUR CREMATED.

Frightful Result of a Fire in a Hospital.

Brave Little Minnie Baumer Prefers Death by Fire Than to Leave Her Patient.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 1.—The Deaconesses home, located on Jennings avenue, is burning and it is reported that four persons have been burned to death. They are:

Albert Almyer.
Minnie Baumer.
An eight-months-old baby.
Jacob Krause.

The fire started in the basement, presumably from the furnace and before it could be extinguished four of the fifteen patients in the house and hospital were dead and the building almost entirely destroyed. Brave work on the part of the firemen and police alone prevented a further loss. The fire started about 11 o'clock.

The Deaconesses' hospital has been in existence but a short time in this city. It is a branch of a large hospital in Chicago and of no especial denomination.

The building was a wooden structure three stories high. In an incredibly short time there was but little left of the building but a few parts of the side walls. The flames had gained considerable headway before the persons located on the top floor discovered their perilous situation. It was then too late to descend by the stairs and those on that floor gave up their lives. Before the fire department had arrived and before the flames had reached the outside of the building Minnie Baumer, one of the nurses, appeared at the up stairs window and implored those below to assist her in getting out her patient, who was Wm. Almyer, one of the men burned. All saw that it would be folly to attempt to enter the building, which was now burning fiercely.

"Jump to the porch and save yourself," they cried to her as she was but fifteen or sixteen feet above the broad veranda roof.

"I can't leave my patient," was the reply of the brave woman, as she turned to look back into the room evidently to quiet the fears of Almyer, who thought she was going to leave him. For a moment the brave woman stood looking down into the crowd below her and then duty triumphed over her desire to be saved. The smoke was pouring from the windows about her and her white, startled face appeared as a picture in a frame of darkest ebony. Then she turned into the room and was seen no more until her blackened form was carried tenderly from the building shortly after.

Aroused by the smoke, James Ebert, one of the patients, groped his way to the side window on the second floor and waved his hand to those outside. His signal was seen and two men secured ladders, spliced them together, and placed them to the window. Ebert started to climb down, but lost his hold and was caught by those below. Four men were taken from the burning building; one was caught in a blanket, and the the four corpses were taken from the building before they had been consumed by the fire.

Jacob Kruse was found at the foot of the stairs leading to the third floor. He had been suffering from a fractured skull and was suffocated. Wm. Almyer was suffering from a broken hip and he was also suffocated. Minnie Baumer, the nurse who had remained to guard him, was found terribly burned at the foot of the bed. In an adjoining room was found the body of a young child eight weeks old. It had been suffocated. The four bodies were placed in a dead wagon and taken to a morgue.

DRUGGIST ACQUITTED.

The Case Against F. H. Fryer, for Selling Whisky

In Less Quantities Than a Quart Without a State License to Do So.

Some of the druggists of the city, who it is alleged violated the law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquor, have been having an inning in court this week and some of them have gone out of it with a fine of $20 and costs taxed up against them on the dockets of the peace justices before whom the cases were tried. The affidavits in each case were filed by men who started out for the avowed purpose of securing convictions and making the testimony. This they did by going to the drug stores and purchasing a half pint bottle of whisky and then going to the justice office and making affidavit that the liquor was sold to them in less quantities than a quart without a license to do so. In several of the cases which were tried the druggists were fined $20 and costs and they appealed the cases to the circuit court, and in others they were acquitted on account of the insufficiency of evidence produced.

The case against F. H. Fryer, who conducts a drug store at 83 Wells street, in Bloomingdale, was tried last night before Justice Hays, where it was taken by change of venue from Justice France. The affidavit was sworn to by Julius Hazen, who alleged in it that on the 28th day of January the druggist's agent, Mrs. Fryer, had sold whisky in less quanity than a quart when he, the druggist, had no legal right to do so.

The case was tried on the part of the state by Deputy Prosecutor Charles Ryan and defended by Attorneys Robert Driebelbiss and Elmer Leonard. The prosecuting witness, Hazen, was placed on the stand and he testified to the purchase of the liquor, a half pint of whisky, from Mrs. Fryer on the date named in the affidavit. In his cross examination Mr. Leonard drew from the witness the fact that he had purposely purchased the liquor, as he had done at other drug stores, for the purpose of making a case against the druggist, and that he did so because he wanted the witness fee in the case, $1, although he qualified it by saying that he believed the druggist was violating the law and he ought to be fined for it.

Mr. Leonard in his rigid cross examination traced the history of Hazen, whom he characterized as a "spotter," from the time that he came to this country in 1880 from Germany up until the present time, showing the different places that he had worked and the length of time that he was out of employment. The man had been a common laborer, working at ditching and such other manual labor as he could find to do. He testified that since the 1st of January he had had only a few days' work and acknowledged that he had been working up these liquor law violations for the purpose of getting the witness fees.

In the testimony he repeatedly said during the cross examination that he had purchased the liquor at Fryer's Monday morning, the 28th of January, and when he left the stand the defendant's attorneys insisted that the case be dismissed because the proof was at variance with the affidavit, which stated that the sale of the liquor was made on the 26th, which would have been last Saturday. This variance Prosecutor Ryan argued was not material. Attorneys Driebelbiss and Leonard insisted that it was, because if the defendant was convicted of selling the liquor on the 26th, he could be tried again in another court for selling it on the 18th. The hour was late when this point in the case was reached, and by agreement further consideration of the contested law point and argument as to the testimony was continued until 10 o'clock this morning.

This morning the state's attorney cited the court to the law and Justice Hays held that there was not such a material difference in the dates as to warrant a dismissal. The attorneys then submitted the case upon the testimony and Justice Hays acquitted the defendant, because the prosecuting witness had said at the time he purchased the liquor that he wanted it for medical purposes.

The law in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors requires that all persons who sell it in less quantities than a quart must take out a state license of $100. This many druggists have not done and in order to permit their sale of it by the pint or half pint they must, according to a late decision, be satisfied that the liquor is for medical purposes and use proper precaution and care in determining whether it is for legitimate purposes. Some are very careless in this matter and they conduct a sort of a saloon bar business without having the proper license to do so.

CHECK FOR $12,000,000.

Transfer of the Brooklyn Water Front Finally Completed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The transferring of the Brooklyn water front interests, representing a capital of over $30,000,000, was completed in the hall of records yesterday by the filing of the deeds. It is the intention of the company to establish a terminal at some point along the water front as a center for a railroad, which is to run along the water. Representatives of all the ... met in the United State... fice, and in less than ... ds of all the ... ed ... had been given a check for the deeds, which were then delivered. One check on the Corn Exchange bank was for over $12,000,000, one of the largest that has ever passed the clearing house. It is asserted that now it will not be necessary for the storage house owners of the east to consult the west when they want to ship a quantity of grain to Europe. It is also said that this consolidation will raise the value of property in the vicinity and cheapen grain shipments.

MUST GO AHEAD.

The Income Tax to be Collected for 1894.

Captain Reese Receives Word From Washington to Proceed With the Enforcement of the Measure.

Fort Wayne capitalists must get ready for the income tax law. The government needs money and the enforcement of this measure has been ordered in every revenue district throughout the United States. Capt. Chas. Reese, the United States deputy revenue collector for this district, received word this morning to proceed at once with the work. He was sent a large lot of blanks for corporations, firms and individuals, who must call upon him, according to the law, and receive the same for the purpose of making their returns. All blanks must be filled out and returned to him before the first Monday of next month and all taxes from this service must be paid on or before the first day of July next. The tax is on all incomes over $4,000 from whatever source, dating from January 1, 1894, to January 1, 1895. It was thought by many that this bill would be declared unconstitutional, but late decisions have influenced the government to proceed with its collections. What a blessed thing it is to be poor!

All persons having an income of $3,500, or more, a year are required to fill out a blank and file it with the collector, although no tax is to be paid on incomes of less than $4,000 a year. This provision is made so the collectors can closely watch all persons whose incomes are likely to reach the $4,000 mark. All corporations, regardless of income, must fill out this blank. The penalty for failure to file the blank at the proper time is fifty per cent. of the assessed tax. The penalty for delinquency is five per cent, and one per cent. a month interest. For a fraudulent statement the penalty is 100 per cent.

When persons refuse or fail to make a statement the collector or deputy is authorized to fill the blank according to such information as he may have. An appeal may be taken from such action within thirty days. Statements held in these returns are to be held strictly confidential, and for the slightest violation of this confidence the penalty is $1,000, two years imprisonment and disfranchisement for life. As usual in all government transactions there are several miles of "red tape" connected with the collection of this tax, and every regulation must be strictly followed or the offender will be liable to fines or penalties. The blanks contain a number of extracts from the law and explanations of the requirements.

WARD M'ALLISTER IS DEAD.

The Well Known Society Man Passes Away—Judge Hoar Dead.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Ward McAllister, the well known society leader, died in this city last night at half past 9 o'clock.

Mr. McAllister was taken ill a week ago with the grip. There were no alarming symptoms surrounding his illness until 7 o'clock yesterday morning. From 10:30 to 2:30 the patient rallied and was much better. At that time he began to sink slowly and died at 9:30 o'clock.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning from Grace church. Bishop Potter will officiate. It is not yet decided whether the interment will be at Greenwood cemetery or at Newport, R. I.

Mr. McAllister was born in Savannah, Ga., sixty years ago. His father was a lawyer and served several terms as mayor of Savannah. His grandfather was a prominent business man in Savannah. The dead man came to this city when he was twenty years of age and remained here until the death of a maiden aunt who left him some money. He then returned to Savannah where he was admitted to the bar.

CONCORD, Mass., Feb. 1.—Judge E. R. Hoar died suddenly at 7:30 o'clock last evening. Ebenezer Rockwook Hoar was born in Concord, Mass., Feb. 21, 1816. He was a brother of United States Senator George F. Hoar. For twenty five years he was a member of the board of overseers of Harvard. In March, 1869, he was appointed by General Grant attorney general of the United States, and discharged the duties of the office until June, 1870.

Local Tramp Statistics Assume Astonishing Proportions.

Police Officers Have Trouble With a Feeble-Minded Blind Boy Sent Here From Harmony.

Some idea of the enormous number of idle men who drift from city to city can be gleaned from the number of applications for shelter made at the police station. Since November 1st, just three months ago, two thousand, two hundred tramps have been given shelter at the station house. Possibly this is not half the number who have come to Fort Wayne and slept in barns, hallways, etc. The number who applied last month was 820.

A SAD SIGHT.

Officer Paul, of the night police force, had a time with a feeble-minded blind boy at the south depot at 2 o'clock this morning. Some days ago application was made from Harmony, Clay county, Ind., for the admission of a sixteen-year old boy named Robert E. McVay. The lad was accepted and yesterday sent to this city. However, instead of sending someone along to look after the lad, the relatives turned him over to the conductor. Mr. Paxson, of the feeble minded institute, was at the depot two or three times yesterday looking for the lad, but did not expect him on the night train. En route to this city the conductor and trainmen had a fearful time with the boy. He bit and fought like a wild beast and Officer Paul had to send for the patrol wagon and have the boy locked up at the police station, when he arrived. During the night Robert tore nearly all his clothing off and was a sorry sight when Mr. Paxson arrived at the station this morning to take him to the institute. The poor little fellow crouched down in one corner of the cell and mumbled and jibbered in a shocking manner, biting his fingers and tearing at his clothing. The boy was at once taken out to the institute.

POLICEMEN AT PLAY.

Yesterday afternoon a dozen or more of the night policemen went to the Princess Rink for a frolic. Whether advised to do so by the board of health or board of safety no one has yet been able to determine. They took Lieutenant Lapp along to summon the ambulance, if necessary, but the lieutenant was himself overcome with a conniption fit when Sergeant Daseler ran into Night Clerk Hoham and swallowed his false teeth. Hoham is still looking for his breath. Driver Saunders had on three pairs of skates—one on his hands, knees and feet—and then he couldn't slide. Some of the newspaper reporters went over to show the "cops" how to skate and slide around like greased marbles on a window glass.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

Miss Snyder Writes to Her Christian Endeavor Friends.

Miss S. S. Snyder, a lady who left this city some time ago to engage in missionary work in Sendai, Japan, writes an interesting letter to her Christian Endeavor friends here in which she gives an interesting account of life as she finds it among the Japanese.

Her description of the houses in which the natives of that country live is especially interesting. "They are very different from the American houses," she writes, "and the representation of a Japanese village as seen at the World's fair was by no means a good one. At Chicago their houses were nice and new, but here in Japan they are very old and queerly built, most of them being but one story high, and with the walls made of bamboo and mud mortar.

"Many of the houses," she continues, "are very poor and would not be used as woodsheds by the people in America, but some of the hou... owned by the more wealthy ... ... quite good. The government ... are constructed after forei... and are quite good."

Finance Committee Think Well of the Peddler Ordinance.

Business Men Meet With Them in the City Hall Last Evening to Talk Over the Matter.

Last evening at the city hall a number of business men and other citizens met with the finance committee of the city council for the purpose of urging the passage of the new ordinance regarding the licensing of peddlers and hawkers. The ordinance was introduced by Councilman Waltemath and on January 8th was referred to the committee on finance.

The ordinance provides that all persons engaged in peddling fruits, vegetables, eggs, butter, poultry, beets or other farm product; fish, goods, wares, medicines, merchandise or other articles of value within the city, shall be compelled to take out a license.

When these articles are sold from wagons a license fee of $50 per year must be paid on each wagon and no license for less than a year can be taken out. Persons selling from baskets, or carts, or carrying their wares on their person in any manner must also take out a license for one year, paying therefor $30 for a full twelve months. The ordinance further provides that the license shall not be transferred and that where the goods are sold from a vehicle it must be provided with a card two feet long and twelve inches wide conspicuously displayed and reading "Licensed Vendor." Peddlers without wagons (as well as those with them) must always have their license ready to show if such is demanded.

Section 5 of the ordinance gives exceptions as follows:

"No license granted or issued under any provision of this ordinance shall be so construed as to entitle any person to the privilege of occupying the stand in any market space or market house, street, lane, alley or commons with table, bench or otherwise; nor authorize the sale, huckstering, peddling or hawking of any article of provisions, vegetables or farm products by a licensed vender upon or in any of the market spaces or market houses of the city or in the streets contiguous thereto during the market hours. Nor shall any of the provisions of this ordinance be so construed as to authorize the sale of goods, wares and merchandise or any articles of provision or vegetables, or farm products by auction or public outcry. Nor shall any of the provisions of this ordinance be so construed as to prevent any farmer or producer from selling at any time or in any place within the city any article of provision or vegetable grown or purchased by him or to persons selling exclusively at wholesale to retail dealers in the city."

Section 6 of the ordinance provides that any person selling unwholesome food such as produce, poultry, meat, fish or adulterated or unwholesome milk shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined not less than $5 or more than $50, and the mayor may revoke the license.

The committee, after hearing the citizens, announced that they would unanimously report in favor of the ordinance when it came up for its final reading and passage on February 12th.

Whether it will then pass the council is another question.

WHAT THEY EAT.

Daily Bill of Fare at the Hotel De Clausmeier.

A SENTINEL reporter dropped into the county jail last evening just as the prisoners were sitting down to their evening meal. If anyone imagines it is fun to be confined to this institution he is badly mistaken. Thirty prisoners, of all ages and nationalities, sat by the long tables and tackled their supper as though they enjoyed it. Not a word was spoken and as fast as each man finished he turned about on the bench and sat with his back to the table, apparently as well satisfied as though he had just finished one of Dick's game dinners. Prison fare is not noted for its variety, but after pounding stone all day most anything in the way of edibles will pass. Here is the daily bill of fare at the Hotel de Clausmeier:

BREAKFAST.

Coffee, Molasses, Br...

DINNER.

Soup, Meat, Beans, Potatoes, Bread.

SUPPER.

Bread, Molasses, Coffee.

While this menu does not readily appeal to the stomach of an epicure, yet it is as good, if not better, than the average prison fare. Each man gets one-half of a loaf of bread at a meal and plenty of coffee and molasses. The dinner meal is the principal meal of the day and at that time each man gets one-half pound of meat. Then the bill of fare is varied every now and then, and as everything about the table is scrupulously neat, the prisoners seldom if ever complain of their treatment at the hands of Sheriff Clausmeier and his obliging deputies.

THE farmers' institutes that have been held during the past two months in various parts of the state, were uniformly largely attended, and awakened deep interest in the matter of progressive and successful farming.

THE Democratic State Editorial association will meet at Indianapolis on the 7th of February—Thursday of next week. Secretary F. D. Haimbaugh requests a full attendance. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected.

THE SENTINEL on Wednesday demonstrated its ability to cover important events happening in whatever part of the world they may occur, quickly and comprehensively. The first bulletin, announcing the wreck of the steamship Elbe, which occurred on that day, reached THE SENTINEL shortly after 2 o'clock and our edition which went to press at 3 o'clock gave a half column account of the casualty.

THE senate has agreed to the treaty with Japan. It places us in relation to that country in the same position as exists between us and the oldest and most humane governments in the western world. The treaty does not go into effect for five years. The treaty is identical with that concluded between Japan and Great Britain. The chief objection to it is that it places foreigners in Japan at the mercy of the local tribunals and up to this time there is no reason to expect that greater justice would be shown them in that country than in China. Five years may work considerable progress in the judicial department of the flowery kingdom, which is modeled in part on that of France and in part on that of England.

THERE will be no suspension of the gold payments by the United States treasury. All danger of that is now past. President Cleveland's stand has saved the national credit. Information has reached the government to the effect that a new loan can be floated in large part abroad. In a few weeks the flow of gold will be from Europe to America. The president and the treasury department at Washington feel satisfied that the storm which has been so long gathering will break without doing serious harm. They are assured there will be a successful floating of a hundred million loan and that influences are at work which will stop the large exportation of gold from this country. Foreign banking houses, representing holders of the bonds of this government to the extent of hundreds of millions, are to take part in the placing of a new loan of a hundred millions of 4 per cent. thirty-year bonds.

Three Subjects of Interest.

Tomorrow's SENTINEL, as is always the case with our Saturday's issue, will be an attractive number, containing, as it will, a number of interesting articles upon special subjects. We have not the time today to speak in detail of each of these articles, but we will, however, call the attention of our readers to three of them, because they will recognize by the illusion to them that they will possess sufficient interest and importance to create a desire for their perusal.

The first article to which we refer is one entitled, "The Six Presidents of France." The third republic of France dates from September 4, 1870, immediately after the downfall of Napoleon III, at the close of his disastrous war with Germany. Louis Adolphe Thiers was elected president August 31, 1871, served as chief executive but two years, three months and seven days and resigned May 24, 1873. Since then France has had five presidents, all of whom have resigned, except one who was assassinated. Tomorrow's SENTINEL will give the life histories of these presidents and in connection with the article we will publish portraits of each of these rulers.

Another article will be one giving the biographies and pictures of the speakers who have been elected this year by twelve of the state legislatures of the union—Fessenden, of Connecticut; Walton, of Pennsylvania; Cross, of New Jersey; Fish, of New York; Gordon, of Michigan; Adams, of Indiana; Meyer, of Illinois; Van Sant, of Minnesota; Lobdell, of Kansas; Russell, of Missouri; Smith, of Texas; Tipton, of Tennessee. Most of them are lawyers and ten of them republicans. The article besides giving their life careers, tells of their personal characteristics and will, we know, prove interesting and instructive to our readers.

The third article is one which relates to our national congress and is a special correspondence written from Washington by THE SENTINEL'S contributor, J. B Parke. It speaks of the newly elected members of congress, giving in detail the personnel of each of them from the different states, the prospects of an extra session and what legislation will and will not probably be enacted. The correspondent handles the matters and things he writes about in an independent manner, giving his own views and THE SENTINEL is not responsible for his opinions of the measures he writes about. The letter will be full of information and will attract attention.

Government Banking.

The financial writer of the New York Sun insists constantly that the United States government is already in the banking business and in heavily. He says:

If the government ought not to issue notes to serve as money because it ought not to do banking, it ought not to continue its supervision of the national banks and the sale of post-office money orders, and it should change its whole present fiscal system into one from which every element of banking shall be excluded.

The fact seems to be entirely overlooked that the United States treasury is, and for more than half a century has been, in a certain sense, the biggest bank in the country and has done a vastly bigger business in the way of receiving and paying out money, which was originally the peculiar function of a banker, than any other institution. By the independent treasury act of 1846, which was the outcome of General Jackson's long and bitter war upon the United States bank, the custody of the entire national revenue was placed in the hands of the government and has ever since remained there. Two years after the passage of this act congress passed a bill intended to establish what was to be called the Fiscal Bank of the United States, but President Tyler, to the great disgust of the party which had elected him vice president, vetoed it, and no effort has since been made to pass another like it.

The bureau of American republics learns that three South American republics, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia, have agreed to submit at least one difference to arbitration. There is a question concerning the real ownership of 30,000 leagues of land lying about the headwaters of the Amazon river. The land is at present held by Peru. Before the independence of Venezuela, Colombia and Ecuador this land was part of the Spanish state of New Granada. It has accordingly been taken for granted that Spain knows more about the question in dispute than any other nation, and Spain has been asked to arbitrate. When Spanish American republics can settle a difference by peaceful arbitration, it looks as though other nations ought to be able to do so.

Premiums for speed above the requirements will be no longer given by the United States to the builders of naval vessels. This is right. Builders, contractors and designers ought to have patriotism enough in their souls to make their country's warships the fastest on the globe without any other reward than the satisfaction to be drawn from that fact and from the appreciation of their grateful fellow countrymen. It is just as well once in awhile still to do something for pure love of one's country. It will have a good effect on the school children.

What Congressman Dingley thinks of the Alaska sealing trade as settled by the Paris arbitration tribunal is shown in the bill he introduced into the house. The bill is a most sarcastic one. It provides that the secretary of the treasury shall cause all the Alaska seals now in ... tence to be slaughtered, skinned and ... ides properly cured. That would ... ntroversy, in Mr. Dingley's ... t would indeed.

ON THE PLANTATION.

THE FARM NEGRO AND HIS LOVE OF SPORT.

Remarkable Habits of Close Observation. Peculiar Superstitions—The Possum Hunt—Fishing In the Old Millpond—Stories Told at the Mill—Social Amenities.

[Special Correspondence.]

JAMISON, S. C., Jan. 29.—The first thing in his life that a negro boy has anything which he can call his own he swaps it for a dog that can run rabbits and squirrels. He trains the dog to bring these rabbits and squirrels to him when they are caught, no matter how much the dog might like the taste of fresh meat himself. When the negro boy has attained the importance of being able to earn a little money by hoeing or picking cotton, gathering peas, shucking corn, driving a wagon or other occupation, he buys a gun, usually a cheap one, with a single barrel and old fashioned manipulations. This weapon is likely to explode when not expected to do so and not to explode when it ought to, but nevertheless it is a gun precious beyond compare in its owner's estimation. It is kept up in the loft or in some secret corner of the cotton house, where thieves may not break in and steal, and as often as possible the owner visits it, rubs it up, examines it over and over again, aims it at various imaginary objects and otherwise delights in his darling possession. Every Saturday after the game laws are "out" these firearms are popping and cracking in every direction on the plantation, and dogs are barking and running hither and thither in pursuit of rabbits, squirrels, partridges or doves. All the boys on the place are on hand, for those not fortunate enough to possess guns themselves are almost as delighted to attend the lucky sportsman who is to bring down the game. A negro boy of 10 years knows the peculiar note or whistle of every bird that inhabits his native woods and swamps. He knows the nature of these birds, whether they remain in the neighborhood all winter, whether the male and female of a certain species have the same note or cry, what kind of nests they have, whether they build them near to the ground or in more inaccessible places. He is familiar with the appearance and habits of these little songsters and calls them by names indicative of certain peculiarities which he or his fathers before him have discovered, without regard to what ornithologists may denominate them.

Bird Lore.

"Dere goes a shirttail!" calls one of a group of small darkies, dodging along a pine woods lane, each crowned with a weighty sack of meal, white in contrast to their dusky faces, each looking with eager interest after the bird that has flitted across the way in front of them. The most conspicuous feature of this bird as he flies is the decided glint of white in his wing; hence the homely appellation with which he has been christened.

"Dat dere's a 'trasher!" these small woods craftsmen will declare, "an dere's his waitin man," indicating a modest appearing brown bird, such as is often seen in company with the thrasher, and which it is insisted the thrasher makes wait upon him.

"De t'rasher oversee de job, but he waitin man got to do all de flyin 'bout an fetchin ob de sticks an straws fo' nest house," explain the little naturalists, and then they will go on to tell you that nobody ever sees a blue jay on Friday, and the reason of their absence is that on that day of the week they are obliged to go to hell.

"Blue jay am de debble's own bird," they say. "He an all he tribe done gifted an giv' ober to de ole Boy, dat mek dey neber mix wid no udder kind ob bird an always fightin and cuttin up."

Every bush and shrub of the numerous kinds in the southern woods has its individual meaning for the negro, and he knows the names of all the various species of trees, all the different kinds of oaks and what they are good for.

"My baby will be a year ole, risin two, when de maple tree blossom red," some buxom matron will say as she displays her sturdy offspring, or she will date his birth from "de time de gessamine fust come," or say, "Hey begin to haul cotton to do gin when he was two day ole."

Out For the Possum.

Passing the average negro house at dusk of a winter's evening one will find the large and small boys of the family, often the sober father himself, engaged in selecting choice pieces of "lightwood" to do duty as torches for use on a possum or coon hunt. The negro rarely takes a gun with him on a possum hunt. Plenty of lightwood to aid him in looking out for snakes and a good sharp ax with which to fell the tree in which the game takes refuge, perhaps a stout stick to help him break through the thicket, usually complete his hunting outfit. The night selected is always on "the dark of the moon." "Possum's cute," they say, and knows well enough that his shadow will betray him on a moonlit night, so he stays in hiding. 'Tis only in the dark that he walks abroad. Lenient landlords, with an abundance of timbered land, do not prohibit the cutting down of trees for the sake of securing a possum or two, and many a noble pine and stalwart sweet gum fall prostrate in the watches of the night amid the yelping of the dogs and the shouts and calls of the sable hunters.

Angling.

Occasionally, when game seems to be shy and the hunt not promising, the possum hunter will kindle a fire right there in the swamp, within a few feet of some black, sluggish looking, winding stream, and go to sleep, depending on the voice of his dog to rouse him when that alert and faithful animal shall have "treed." The young negroes, as a rule, go hunting in company, reveling in the fun of a merry party, but the older heads often go totally alone, spending night after night in the dense swamps that edge the fields, their dog their only companion, undeterred by the presence of owls and bats and myriad crawling reptiles from enjoying their fascinating pursuit. On a spring evening, or any time after the fish have begun to run up streams, one will find all the darkies fixing their nets, fishing canes, lines and hooks, hunting up cans for bait, etc., to set out for the adjacent ponds and creeks there to spend the greater part of the night angling for the fish, which abound in the southern waters. And this is a pursuit in which the women join with the men. All along the banks of the creeks and ponds lights are gleaming and torches flashing where these night fishermen are seeking to inveigle the finny tribe. If the plantation boasts a water mill, as most plantations do in that well watered country, and if that water mill is not only for grinding corn and ginning cotton, but also for sawing logs, then the fishing is particularly seductive, for then whole parties can go "gigging."

The miller is persuaded to shut off nearly all the water from the flood gate ... just below his mill gates, and on this surface the unsuspecting fish are ... is speared, thrust through ... with a miniature pitchfork ... ned for the p...

Social Sports.

When one watches a group of plantation negroes, many of whom are middle aged or even grandfathers, assembled at the mill, where they have taken their corn to be ground on a winter's evening, their marvelously unequaled good nature and ... contentment with life impress the beholder. Two stalwart men will go to wrestling to entertain the onlookers, or else a half dozen will undertake to surpass each other's agility in jumping long distances, and before the party breaks up some well known local "shuffler" will make the bare rough platform over the mill race resound with the measured patting and kicking and trotting in and out of his nimble feet, some one of the bystanders clapping his hands in that peculiar rhythmic fashion which the darkies have. Story will be the tales of "Jack o' my Lantern" and "spirits," apparitions, told round the blazing lightwood logs, and later some one will come up with a roll of possum, or perhaps a newly acquired ration of meal and meat, and cook it right there on that open fire, sharing it readily with any who are hungry.

SOME STORIES OF DOGS.

They Are Offered Apropos of the Imminent Opening of the Bench Show Season.

[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The bench show season will shortly begin, and then the annual wave of dog stories will surge through the land. In fact, it has already reared its awful crest, as I discovered yesterday during a two hours' ride in the smoking car of an accommodation train.

As is always the case on such a train, the personnel of the passengers was constantly changing, but there were two men besides myself who remained in the car as long as I did, and they both had a few dog stories to tell. I started the trouble, innocently enough, by speaking of Strip, the dog that was employed in London two or three years ago to insert electric wires in subways.

"That's a good story, stranger," said the man who was sitting in the seat with me as he bit off a big chew of plug cut, "but lemme tell you about a dog I know about. This dog was in New Jersey five or six years ago, and he was just naturally the knowingest dog on four legs. He belonged to a man named Young in Flagtown, Somerset county. Ever been down there? Well, if you had, you'd have heard of Young's dog Frank. Frank is a liver and white mottled, full bred Ridgeway setter, and Young has trained him till you can't rest. As a sporting dog he's the best I ever saw, but it's in other things that he is really great. When Young gets up in the morning, he yells to Frank.

"'Get me my duds, old chap,' Young says, and you ought to see that dog gather up the clothes.

"Whenever Young wants to go walking, he lets Frank know, and the dog jumps on the rack and gets his master's hat. He'll carry a note to any one and wait for the answer, and when Young is cutting kindling wood the dog carries the sticks into the kitchen and puts them in the woodbox. More than one man had tried to buy Frank when I heard about him, but Young used to say there wasn't enough money in Somerset county to get that dog."

"When I was up in Winnipeg two or three years ago," said a man wearing a fur cap who sat in front of us, "I heard about a dog that went out with his master shooting. There were plenty of prairie chickens that day, and the dog pointed 'em all right, and the man shot every time, but for some reason he didn't hit any bird. Well, finally he quit and started home. The dog seemed to be awfully downhearted, but when they got almost to the house he got excited and grabbed the man's coat, like he wanted to lead him somewhere. Well, the man had to go, and where do you suppose the dog led the fellow? Well, sir, it was straight to the market, and when he got the man there he gave one look at the hundreds of prairie chickens there for sale, and then he just pointed, and he wouldn't go away till the man had bought."

The man who was sitting with me seemed to take this story as a direct reflection on the truth of the one he had told and straightway retorted with another, which was manifestly invented, and then the man with the fur cap told of a dog that could chew tobacco and expectorate as accurately as Dickens' Mr. Chollop, whose exploits were recorded in "Martin Chuzzlewit." I am not sure how long they would have continued their rivalry if I had not silenced both by telling about the swimming races between dogs that were carried on near Boston two or three years ago. Although this story of mine was perfectly true, and the result of the races was printed in the newspapers the day after their occurrence, both my companions evidently thought me a romancer whom they could not hope to rival, and the conversation was abruptly changed.

Put Off.

There is a young lady living out in the west end who teaches a class at a mission Sunday school in the suburbs. Each Sunday she encourages the children to be present on the following Sunday by giving them a hint in glowing terms of what the next lesson will be.

Last Sunday, as usual, she told them that next Sunday's lesson would be about Lot's wife—how she disobeyed and looked over her shoulder, and how she was turned into a pillar of salt.

While the rest of the class were revolving the wonderful story in their minds in open mouthed astonishment there were two soiled fingers shaking violently over the heads of the balance, and when the young lady asked for the question the owner of the fingers exclaimed:

"Teacher, did they eat the salt?"

The young lady's forethought is the better part of her wisdom. She was puzzled only for a moment. She smiled upon the tot who had given her such a close call and answered:

"Oh, you must come next Sunday and hear."—Cincinnati Tribune.

His Great Scheme.

"I have a scheme," said the man of ideas.

"You always have," said his friend.

"Yes, but this is a good one. It is worth millions, and if you will advance me half a dollar to get a pork and bean dinner I'll let you in on the ground floor."

The other hesitatingly handed over the half dollar.

"Now, what's your scheme?" said he.

"Why, I'm going to the west and show the people how to build cyclone proof cities."

"How will you make them cyclone proof?"

"Why, I'll build them all on wheels, so when the people see a cyclone coming they can hitch a couple of traction engines to them and pull them out of the way."—Leavenworth Times.

Lyon Medicine Co., Indianapolis, Ind.:

GENTS—I think it my duty to send this statement to you of the benefit I have received from LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. I have been afflicted for twenty years with stomach trouble of the severest nature. Would have seasons of the severest suffering from one to two months at a time. Between these times of suffering was never longer than three months. There was never any time that I was entirely free from misery more or less. These spells of great suffering would sometimes come on with sickness and vomiting, and other times would come on in form of rheumatism, but would finally center itself in my stomach. I have doctored with a great many physicians, but none of them could tell me what the trouble was. I was unable to get relief until I got LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. It is now sixty days since I began taking this medicine, and am now for the first time in twenty years free from pain and misery. I am compelled to say it is a blessing to a poor man.

HARVESTING CORN.

A New Hampshire Method Which Affords Suggestions to Other Sections.

A New Hampshire correspondent of The New England Homestead describes his plan of harvesting the corn crop. It is not without good points for some other localities. He says:

I plant my corn in sections of 12 rows, skip three, plant 12 more, skip three,

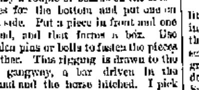

A HARVESTING WAGON.

and so on. I plant potatoes, peas or anything that can be harvested before the corn in those three rows, as shown below:

xxxxxxxxxxxx . . . xxxxxxxxxxxx . . .
xxxxxxxxxxxx . . . xxxxxxxxxxxx . . .

For a harvesting wagon I take the axle, A A, and wheels of my hay rigging and take two stout poles, B B, and attach them to the rocker and hind axle the same as to a hay rigging, and then bore four holes, C C C C, in each pole. I then put four stakes, D D D D, in each pole underneath and let them hang down 18 inches from the top of the poles, then put the crosspieces on from one stake to the other and pin them fast and lay a couple of boards on the crosspieces for the bottom and put one on each side. Put a piece in front and one behind, and that forms a box. Use wooden pins or bolts to fasten the pieces together. This rigging is drawn to the first gangway, a bar driven in the ground and the horse hitched. I pick the ears of corn first and put them in this rigging. I take six rows on each side of the gangway, and when I come to the next gangway I do the same, and so on until the piece is covered. The ears of corn are put in a large open chamber and husked at my leisure.

HORSE FOR SHOCKING CORN.

Then I make a horse for shocking corn.

Take a small pole and bolt the legs to the pole and bore a hole for the pin. The cornstalks are shocked as I go along. I take six rows, three on each side of the horse, and bind the shocks with rope. There will be two rows of shocks in a section. I use the same rigging to draw my cornstalks to the barn, and the shocks are easily taken off. I put my cornstalks just where I want them and do not disturb them until fed out. There is no waste in feeding. I do my work all alone without any help. This is the cheapest way and best to harvest the corn crop that I know of.

The Complete Fertilizer.

It is commonly said that a "complete" fertilizer need contain only the three mineral elements which are usually deficient in the soil—viz, potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen. Practically, however, we find that, though a soil may be rich in each of the elements which go to make up the plant, it is impossible to secure good or even fair crops unless it contains, in addition to these, a liberal supply of humus, which is formed whenever vegetable matter decays in the soil, and it is in the formation of this material that the practice of plowing under green crops has its greatest value. It is plentiful in all fresh soils, but becomes exhausted by continued cultivation in hoed crops, especially in the hill lands, and the supply must be renewed before chemical fertilizers can be used to advantage. It is the necessary foundation of all fertility, and without it the use of any commercial fertilizer is sure to be disappointing. If the fertilizers used do not contain humus making material, it must sooner or later be supplied by the plowing under of green crops or by turning the land out to rest.—Farmers' Review.

Hens and Grapevines.

An English authority calls attention to the fact that some of the best French poultry emanate from the wine districts of France. In the Medoc, where claret comes from, they are to be seen in large numbers, although the vines are not more than 15 inches in height. Here they are given full liberty and allowed to wander where they like for ten months in the year, only being removed during July and August, when the grapes are ripening. Instead of being injurious, they are found very serviceable indeed in clearing the vines of insects and grub, cleaning the land and supplying it with a valuable manure. This arrangement fits in with the requirements of poultry, for by the beginning of July there has been a great reduction in numbers, the chickens for marketing purposes having all been killed by that time, and thus the stock is more limited in number than it would be earlier in the year.

Circumventing the Army Worm.

As a rule, the remedies are applied too late. In general, it may be said that as soon as the worms are discovered to be exceptionally numerous in a given field all energy should be devoted to the protection of the surrounding crops by plowing a furrow about the field, with its perpendicular side toward the territory to be protected. The destruction of the worms in the fields first attacked may be safely left to the last part of the work. Clean cultivation, rotation of crops, clearing up fence corners, close pasturage, the burning of waste grass land in spring or fall, are all preventive measures of great value.

WINTER POULTRY HOUSE.

It Secures the Necessary Exercise For Fowls During Cold and Rainy Seasons.

There is no denying the fact that fowls need exercise in the open air during the winter season to secure the best results with them, but with the ordinary poultry house this is almost impracticable. If the outside door and windows are opened in comes the rain, hail, sleet or chilling wind that renders the house too cold. Webb Donnell illustrates in The Country Gentleman a successful attempt to solve this problem of securing open air exercise for fowls during inclement weather.

The house is the familiar shed roofed affair, but having in this case a projection in front, separated entirely from the main apartments to be used as a scratching room. It is entered from the main room by small doors that can be closed at night, while the outside air and sunshine are admitted through small windows close to the ground. These glass windows can be raised during the day, the fowls and the litter being kept within by wire netting.

This scratching room should have a generous coating of loam upon the floor, and upon this cut hay, straw or other litter should be placed. Grain scattered in this will be eagerly searched for, as there are few hens that do not enjoy scratching, even when they are not hungry, provided such scratching can be done where there is light and fresh air. Such a house can be extended to any length desired, according as one may desire to keep a greater or smaller number of fowls.

Marketing the Honey Crop.

The advice of The American Bee Journal is to cultivate local markets. There are many risks in shipping comb honey, especially to distant markets, with the facilities and skill for crating properly possessed by the average beekeeper. But little comb honey ever reaches its destination without damage and loss to the producer. The authority referred to says: "For some years we have made special effort to introduce extracted honey in our own local markets, and by having our goods of the very highest quality we have in three seasons easily established a demand for all the liquid honey we can produce. The same can be done in each locality, provided none but first class, properly cured honey is offered. We advise taking a sample of the honey for testing, visiting the best families in town and country, taking orders and delivering the goods, being careful to have the honey equal or better than the sample. In this way we find a market for all our extracted honey at 12½ cents per pound. Comb honey can be sold in the same way. This year the crop is so small there is no need of any haste in selling, and those who rush to sell for the first offer are sure to suffer loss."

Grasshopper Catching Machines.

The fields in many sections of the country this season have been black with locusts and grasshoppers. Catching machines and "hopper dosers" have been constructed in a variety of designs for the annihilation of the pests. In Colorado the "hopper dosers," with kerosene pans at the bottom, are extensively used and are very successful. They cost only a few dollars, are mounted on runners, like a sled, but are operated much the same as the one in the accompanying sketch from the Pennsylvania Grit.

This consists of a wide open canvas frame mounted upon four wheels. Inside the frame is an endless wire screen, passing between two rollers. The hoppers, caught by the wide open mouth, are thrown upon the wire, crushed between the rollers and drop to the ground. This machine is pushed by a horse fastened behind, so that there is here almost literally exemplified a condition of "cart before the horse."

Government on Feeding Wheat.

The agricultural department at Washington has issued a bulletin on feeding wheat to stock. The bulletin advocates the use of screenings and low grade of wheat as animal food and the placing of only the best wheat on the market. Equal parts of wheat and corn prove better for fattening animals than either of these grains alone. For growing animals corn is plainly not so suitable as is wheat or oats. When wheat and corn are the same price per bushel, it is preferable to feed wheat and sell corn. Wheat should at first be fed in small quantities. It should, when possible, be mixed with some other grain, and care should be taken to prevent any one animal from getting more than the quantity intended for it. These precautions are especially necessary when wheat is fed to horses. The best form in which to feed wheat is to roll or grind it into a coarse meal. It may then be fed alone or mixed with cornmeal or ground oats.

The best information now obtainable shows that the practice of feeding wheat to farm animals has become common among the farmers and feeders of Kansas. Even those of Nebraska, Oklahoma and Missouri are, to a limited extent, feeding their wheat instead of selling it at present shipping prices.

WHY IT WAS UNFINISHED.

She Explained the Delay, and It Was Made Right.

Both were young, and she was fair. He had been calling on her seven evenings and one afternoon a week for six months. Still nothing was settled, although he was in the habit of lingering before jewelers' show windows and asking every young married man of his acquaintance if it really did not cost as much to keep one as two. As for her, she was spending 10 hours a day over the embroidering of table linen, which, instead of dedicating to the family use, she carefully locked away as soon as finished. Meanwhile the sister next in succession was clamoring for the reversion of the parlor, and the younger brothers sat in the seat of the scornful.

One evening he noticed an unusual abstraction in her manner.

"You are not offended with me?" he asked. "I know I didn't get here until 12 minutes past 8, but the car stopped in the tunnel and"—

"Offended? Not at all," and she gazed dreamily into the fire.

"Perhaps you are ill, then. You know you had lost a pound and a half last time we were weighed, and you haven't eaten all the candy I brought yet. You must be very careful of your health."

The absent gaze wandered over his head. "I am quite well, thank you, only a little thoughtful. The serious problems of life must sometimes present themselves to one's mind."

"You can't decide whether to have a jacket or a cape? Or is it whether to have your photographs profile or three-quarter face?"

"Nothing so frivolous! This is really something important."

"You—you don't think of parting your hair, do you? Or is it possible that you contemplate entering a convent?"

"No, no! I can't tell you what it is, but"—

"I see it now—I see it all!" he burst forth. "You are expecting that Miller fellow. Well, I will say good evening. I would not interfere with such a delightful visit."

"I don't see why you say 'that' Miller. I think him a charming fellow."

"So does he. Good evening, Miss Daisy."

"I—why, what is your hurry?"

"You said that you expected Miller and"—

"Why, I said nothing of the kind! He is calling on Julia this evening. I saw his shadow on the ... his such absurd cats."

"Oh, well, Miller i... low! But you haven't ... you are thinking of."

"Oh, I can never tel... think it silly. You are ... at it."

"Can it be about the ... en?"

"How clever of yo... over guess? But I can ... you."

"Then I shall think it a joke at my expense. I insist on knowing."

"Oh, it's not a joke at all, but if you insist"—

"I do insist."

"But, Mr. Smiffkins, I really can't. Well, if you will know. I have finished embroidering enough of it—well, enough for a—a small family, and now I don't know what initial to put on it, and it naturally makes me rather thoughtful."

The next day she took her linen down town and had the letter "S" stamped on every piece.—Chicago Tribune.

Trees In French Cities.

One of the chief beauties of the larger French cities and second only to their edifices and monuments are the trees. The almost interminable vistas of chestnuts and acacias stretching along the broad and well paved avenues as far as the eye can reach, their bending branches almost touching one another in an endless arch of verdure, form not only a delightful perspective for the eye, but serve to add beauty to cities already beautiful and grace and symmetry to whatever might be harsh and forbidding.

This, however, is not the result of nature's handiwork alone, for science and art have lent their aid. The planting, as well as the maintenance of the trees in French cities, is an item of no little importance in the annual budget prepared by the municipal council, which does not look upon their preservation as of less consequence than the repairing of the roadways or the lighting of the streets.—London Times.

WORTHY MAN HONORED.

D. F. Crawford the Recipient of a Handsome Present.

A Number of Our Citizens Moving to St. Louis—Fireman Schwabe Falls off His Engine.

Mr. D. F. Crawford, who has been the assistant master mechanic of the Pittsburg shops for the past three years, left last evening for Pittsburg, where he will enter a course of study in electricity at the works of the Westinghouse people. Previous to his departure he was summoned to the store room office, where, in the following neat little speech, Mr. Enoch Cox, in behalf of the heads of the departments of the of the various departments of the shops and the clerks therein, presented Mr. Crawford with a set of elegantly bound books upon "Electricity." Mr. Cox said:

"The Good Book, which we all read more or less and with which you are doubtless perfectly familiar, recites that the early command of God to man was: 'Go forth and subdue the earth.' As the result of my religious meditations I have concluded that the meaning and spirit of that command was, and to this day is: Go forth and subdue the forces of Nature and make them subservient to and tributary to the comfort and profit of mankind. Perhaps of all the latent forces within the metes and bounds of earth, the most intangible, yet powerful, is that of electricity. The investigation and development of this wonderful force, it would seem, is to be the labor of your life. These, your friends, recognize and appreciate your zeal in your special work, and even in our dim, uncultured vision we catch a glimpse of the marvelous mechanical possibilities which electrical art and science have as yet but feebly revealed. It will be your work to assist (may we indulge the hope that you shall lead) in this wonderful revelation. These volumes, which I am commissioned by your friends to present to you, may, we trust, serve incidentally to now and then remind you of their friendship and earnest solicitude for your welfare and prove of substantial aid to you in your future work. We beg you to accept them in appreciation of the generous impulse which actuates the hearts of those who give them. It is their wish that peace, prosperity, health and happiness shall attend you to your new home and abide with you in the years to come. Electrically speaking, may your insulation against the ills and woes of life be perfect; may you never encounter a grounded wire, and, finally, when the Great Electrician throws the switch and the vital current is no more of earth, may your fading vision behold the record of an achievement which shall make your name an inspiration to those who follow in your field of labor."

Mr. Crawford was completely surprised, but during the speech he recovered his composure sufficiently to respond to Mr. Cox, expressing his thanks and appreciation of the token of the kindly feelings and respect entertained for him. There were present at the presentation about forty of the officials and clerks.

MINOR MENTION.

For Fresh Candies, etc., call at Batchelder's, 29 West Main street.

Nickel Plate Fireman Jerome has taken a leave of absence of a week.

Pete Lauer, of the Pittsburg car shops, severely injured the thumb of his left hand yesterday.

E. Hardendorf, who received a bad scalp wound while working in the Pittsburg lumber yards last Monday, resumed work this morning.

John Lazarus, traffic manager of the Indianapolis, Decatur and Western, will resign soon to take a similar position with the Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City road.

The Queen and Crescent has notified northern connections that the company will make a one fare round trip rate to New Orleans on account of Mardi Gras, February 25 and 26.

George L. Rhodes, who recently resigned as assistant general passenger agent of the Chicago and Rock Island, is to go with E. St. John, general manager of the Seaboard Air-line.

Machinist Fred Olds of the Pittsburg shops, went to Elkhart yesterday to attend the funeral of Mrs. W. H. Baker, mention of whose death was made in a previous issue of The Sentinel.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature of Connecticut compelling the railways to carry passengers at one cent per mile. It is said to be a direct attack on the New Haven and Hartford road.

The Columbus and Hocking Valley company will discard the sign at crossings of highways reading: "Look out for the cars," and in its place put up one in bold, black letters. "Stop, look and listen."

Passenger engine 157, which is said to be the fastest runner of all Nickel Plate engines on this end of the line, has just came out of the shops and will resume her former run on the fourth district. No. 157 is now as good as new and looks handsome in her new coat of paint.

Pittsburg Engineer Slagle is off duty on account of the illness of his wife.

John Haynes, a carpenter in the shops of Blumesnith & Simonson, is sick and off duty.

M. H. Morrison, of the Pittsburg blacksmith shop, is off duty, pending repairs to his furnace.

D. L. Carpenter, F. W. Weber and H. C. Rippe, of the Wabash shops, are off duty on account of sickness.

The clerks in the Pittsburg and the Wabash shops are very busy today, making up the January pay rolls.

John Bacht has resumed his work in the Pittsburg tank shop after several days' absence on account of the death of his aunt.

T. G. Hunt, foreman of the car department of the Pittsburg at Chicago, is in the city on business connected with his office.

Boilermaker Henry Gerken spent the biggest portion of last night in repairing the boiler of a Pittsburg engine at Lima, Ohio.

Foreman William Meyers, of the Bass machine shop, was accidentally struck upon the knee by a sledge hammer yesterday and is quite lame.

Machinist John F. Fredericks, of the Bass works, left this morning for Bridgeport, Ohio, to set up a large Bass Improved Corliss engine in a rolling mill.

Charles R. Wermuth, the contractor who is putting up the addition to the Kerr Murray works, had one of his feet crushed by a heavy timber falling upon it this morning.

H. L. Reed, a Nickel Plate fireman, has been promoted from the freight to the passenger service and will have a run with Engineer Ross Germain, between this city and Chicago.

W. C. Heine, of the Wabash shops, was informed by telegraph yesterday of the death of his mother-in-law and has gone to attend the funeral. The deceased did not live in this city.

Railway men say that before last Monday no passenger was ever killed in an accident on the Vandalia. The road has been in operation thirty years and the record is believed to be without a parallel.

A number of Nickel Plate brakemen are sick and off duty, among them being O. E. Lehnecke, T. H. Whitby, A. Bowman and J. Hamilton. G. A. Harrison, who was absent a few days, reported yesterday.

Wabash Fireman R. J. O'Neil, of the Lafayette accommodation, fell and sprained his wrist at Buck Creek last evening. He came to this city this morning and is now at his boarding house on Calhoun street.

Henry Reike is improving and there now appears to be no room for doubt that he will soon be up again. He is a carpenter and when not sick is employed at building engine tanks and pilots at the Pittsburg shops.

W. F. Geller's horse, which was attached to a delivery sleigh, ran away at the Pittsburg depot this morning. The sled was upset and its contents, including the driver, were dumped on the cold, cold earth. No other damage.

... Auth, the brakeman of the west Nickel Plate local freight, who was injured a week ago while on duty, resumed work last evening. W. L. Stanley, another brakeman, also reported for duty yesterday, after three weeks' sickness.

Martin Shuler, night watchman at the Pittsburg car shops, fell on the icy walk near the shop this morning. Some workmen picked him up and carried him within, where he soon recovered from the shaking up and was able to walk home.

Pittsburg Fireman J. Schwabe fell off his engine at Warsaw last night and dislocated his right shoulder blade and cut and bruised his head. He was brought here at 12 o'clock and Dr. Geo. C. Stemen attended him. Mr. Schwabe resides at No. 39 Lasello street.

Next week the traveling and district passenger men of the Wabash will meet General Passenger Agent Crane at St. Louis. There are thirty one agents in all, among them R. G. Thompson, of this city. There is a silly rumor in circulation that this meeting will result in the loss of employment to a few of the agents.

Another paper railroad is being built in Kansas. It is called the Chicago, Kansas and Arkansas, and is projected to run from St. Joseph to Little Rock. The "general offices" are located at a crossroads in Doniphan county, Kansas, and an army of officers have been elected. There has been no construction, however.

Next Tuesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Haswell, of Oliver street, Miss Effie Haswell will be married to Mr. John Russell. The groom is a machinist and is employed in the Bowser Oil Tank works. Both prospective groom and bride are well known and popular young people.

W. A. Bowdon, who had been working in Yardmaster Samuel Grable's office as telegraph operator for some months, has been given a position in under Chief Dispatcher Caldwell, in the down town offices of the Nickel Plate. The vacancy in the yard office was filled by C. H. Meek, who had been working during the nights at the same place.

A mysterious fire broke out in the cab of Nickel Plate engine No. 90 yesterday afternoon and before the flames were discovered the paint had been removed from the interior wood work and the engineer's and firemen's cushions were ruined. The engine had, about a half hour previous to the fire, been run in the round house by the hostler. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Next Monday morning the Anthony Wayne Manufacturing company will start its St. Louis factory in operation, employing about thirty workmen, most of whom will go from this city and leave tonight. Among the list are the following, who have been working in the company's shop in this city: William Kempf, Samuel Etsall, Julius Vogler and Frank Etsall. From outside the factory the following will go: John Streblg, O. E. Black, Fred Day and Alex. Reinewald. Capt. F. F. Boltz will have charge of affairs for the company at St. Louis and will also leave for that city tonight.

Patrick Sullivan owns land near Solomonville, A. T., over which the Gila Valley, Globe and Northern built its railroad track last summer, according to Sullivan, without permission. Last Sunday he erected a frame building on the railroad track and surrounded it by a wire fence. He moved his family into the structure and the next train was obliged to halt. When William Garland, president of the railroad, who was on the train, attempted to remove the wire fence, Sullivan leveled a shotgun at the president, warning him to keep hands off, advice which Garland promptly followed. The train was obliged to return and a warrant was issued for Sullivan's arrest. He still effectually blockaded the track, however, although District Attorney Jones says he will remove the obstruction and arrest all parties offering resistance. The case is considered unique in the annals of railroad construction.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

His Letter.

There's the postman! Now the letter
I have waited for is here.
I am fairly wild, delirious,
Since he's bringing me such cheer.
Yes, he's coming! Now he's ringing
Briskly at the front door bell.
All my heart with joy is singing,
Yet no words its joy can tell.

Good! I've got it! Finely scented,
Fair to see in latest style—
It's from her! She has relented!
I could kill it for a while!
Quick—in here where it is lighter!
Bless her heart! My darling said
She has made my whole life brighter—
Hang the postman! It's a dun!

"Yield Not to Misfortune."

I was afflicted with catarrh last autumn. During the month of October I could neither taste or smell and hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus Geo. Shautz, Rahway, N. J.

I suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since a boy, and I never hoped for cure, but Ely's Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill. Cream Balm is agreeable.

The highly talented composer and leader, also director of the famous Chautauqua School of Music, Prof. W. F. Sherwin, commends the World's Sweetest Songs in substance as follows: "They are a most charming collection for the home circle. The selections show fine taste and excellent judgment, while the variety is wonderful, stretching away from the simple Cradle Song to Haydn's Aria 'With Verdure Clad.' They will bring genial sunshine and refinement to the home." tf

WORLD'S SWEETEST SONGS Can now be secured at this office. Parts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 are now on hand. One coupon and ten cents for each part.

THE BIG SALE

Of the C. O. D. Stock continues to grow every day. The Public are taking a lively interest in this great Slaughter Sale of the Lauferty Stock, and we'll take care that the interest does not lag until every dollar's worth of

CLOTHING,

Hats and Furnishing Goods

Is disposed of. Each day's sales surpass the other, and if we keep on with the increase there won't be much left of the stock when we are ready to talk about our new spring merchandise.

LOW PRICES

For GOOD, HONEST MERCHANDISE, is the magnet with which we are drawing this great volume of business. No sale where there has been such utter disregard of cost and values has ever taken place in this city before. We own this stock so cheap that we are prepared to do wonders in the way of low prices and still be able to make a small margin of profit.

OUR DEAR COMPETITORS

Are very much rattled and are doing us an excellent turn in advertising our sale. One prospective competitor, in particular, is driven to such desperation that he has allowed himself to become almost personal in his advertisements. We are simply waiting for

The Infant to be Born

And, in the meantime, we'll attend strictly to our own business and to the charging of our batteries—later on we may deem it business policy to press the button.

A. D. CRAIG

Conducts Interesting Meetings at Hoagland, Ind.

HOAGLAND, Ind., Jan. 29, 1895.

A. D. Craig, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Sunday school convention recently held in Fort Wayne, made a very profitable visit to Hoagland and vicinity last Saturday and Sunday. In the afternoon he conducted a Sunday school teachers' meeting and in the evening a Bible reading in the Hoagland church.

After being entertained at the home of Mr. Frank Hubler he took part in three meetings on Sunday, two of them being in the Antioch church, one-half mile west of the little town of Hoagland. His last and best was given to the Christian Endeavor society Sunday evening, his subject was, "How to Get Ready for Our Revival Meetings," which was highly enjoyed by the audience. The different talks did much good in stirring up the people in the interest of Sunday school work.

SUITS FOR DAMAGES

Will be the Result of the Butte Dynamite Explosion.

BUTTE, Mont., Feb. 1.—The coroner's investigation in the death of Fireman George Fifer and fifty-seven others who lost their lives in the frightful explosion of dynamite Tuesday, Jan. 15, has closed, and a verdict was rendered fixing the responsibility on the Kenyon-Kennet Commercial company and the Butte Hardware company, and holding them guilty of criminal negligence. It is probable that a grand jury will be called to pass on the testimony and coroner's verdict, and many suits for damages against the parties mentioned are in preparation.

W., celebrated the sixth anniversary of its organization and was royally entertained with short speeches by Brothers Coverdale, Buchman, Harries, Miller, Holverstott, Polhamus, Hench and Conover, of No. 36, and Brothers Brown, master workman of No. 50, and Thos. Griffin, of No. 19. This lodge was organized six years ago last evening with thirty-one charter members and the roll call of the charter membership list showed quite a number of the charter members present and the death of only one, that of Prof. J. W. Whiteleather. The lodge is in very good financial condition. Before the meeting closed a committee was appointed to confer with the other lodges and make arrangements for a reception to be given February 13 in honor of Grand Master T. D. Neal and Grand Recorder Fred Baker.

It appears to be an unwritten but very potent law that my lady should make up her summer wardrobe while winter winds most violently do rage. To buy organdies, Swisses and muslins in April or May is too prosaic for toleration by the grande dame. Therefore, she who revels in the aforesaid title puts on her furs, and if possible, sallies forth in a snow storm to buy those sheer fabrics that give one a chill just to look upon. There are printed dimities, printed jaconets, printed lawns and lovely chintzes most delicate and enticing to the eye. The astute men know that never can these dainty and summery fabrics appeal so strongly to the senses as now, while winter reigns and thick woolens and heavy stuffs are so necessary. Aside from the strictly floral patterns there are some fine white goods with herringbone stripes, with a line of color down each stripe. Ribbon will be the popular trimming for these frocks and in many instances sets of harness in various colors make a single frock resemble and answer the purpose of many.

BOILER CLEANSING COMPOUND.

The attention of owners of steam boilers is called to the old and reliable never-failing Boiler Cleansing Compound, Lord's Patent Improved, for the removing of old scales and preventing of new in steam boilers.

This Compound does not vaporize, and is in consequence being successfully used by Refineries, Breweries, Cracker Bakeries, Candy manufactories, Hotels, Laundries, and many other establishments where pure live steam is required.

This Compound is substantially endorsed by U. S. Chemists, who have made chemical examinations, proclaiming it absolutely free from acids, agents so often resorted to in compounding so called boiler compounds, often used with fatal results to steam boilers and their connections.

The success of this Compound is the outcome of a lifetime study by a competent firm, and the great secret of their success is, that each and every package is prepared especially to suit the occasion.

This celebrated Compound is manufactured by Thos. C. Warley & Co., (successors to S. W. Lord & Co.,) of Philadelphia, Pa.
